WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

We meet 'neath the sounding rafter,
And the walls around us are bare,
As they shout to our peals of laughter—
It seems that the dead are there.
But stand to your glasses, steady!
We drink to our comrades' eyes;
A cup to our dead already,
And hurrah! for the next that dies.

Not here are the goblets glowing,
Not here is the vintage sweet;
'Tis cold, as our hearts are growing,
And dark as the doom we meet.
But stand to your glasses, steady!
And soon shall our pulses rise—
A cup to the dead already;
Hurrah! for the next that dies.

Not a sign for the lot that darkles!
Not a tear for the friends that sink;
We'll fall midst the wine cup's sparkles,
As mute as the wine we drink.
So stand to your glasses, steady!
'Tis this that the respite buys;
One cup to the dead already;
Hurrah! for the next that dies.

Time was when we frowned at others;
We thought we were wiser then;
Ha! ha! let them think of their mothers,
Who hope to see them again.
No, stand to your glasses, steady!
The thoughtless are here, the wise;
A cup to the dead already;
Hurrah! for the next that dies.

There's many a hand that's shaking;
There's many a cheek that's sunk;
But soon, though our hearts are breaking
They'll burn to the wine we've drunk.
So stand to your glasses steady!
'Tis here the revival lies;
A cup to our dead already;
Hurrah! for the next that dies.

There's a mist on the glass concealing
'Tis the hurricane's fiery breath;
And thus does the warmth of feeling
Turn to the ice of death.
Ho! stand to your glasses, steady!
For a moment the vapor flies;
A cup to the dead already;
Hurrah! for the next that dies.

Who dreads to the dust returning?
Who shrinks from the sable shore,
Where the high and haughty yearning
Of the soul shall sting no more?
No! stand to your glasses, steady!
This world is a world of lies;
A cup to the dead already;
Hurrah! for the next that dies.

Cut off from the land that bore us,
Betrayed by the land we find,
While the brightest have gone before us,
And the dullest remain behind!
Stand! stand to your glasses, steady!
'Tis all we have left to prize;
A cup to the dead already;
And hurrah! for the next that dies.

[The above relates to the early service of English officers in India, when the army was mowed down by pestilence. The almost inhuman refrain of each verse is only illustrative of the certainty of the doom that awaits them, by exhibiting the depths of reckless revelry, to which they sought to steel their senses against it.]

A LILY AND A ROSE;

OR,

THE SCHEMER AND HIS VICTIMS.

CHAPTER XLVI.—(CONTINUED.)

The news spread through the fashionable world like wildfire, Lillian Garton, or Grantley, the great heiress, dead! It could not be! And yet it was a fitting climax to the romance that had so amused society during the summer. The bride of an hour was dead! Leonard Grantley's pictures were snapped up at any price, the upper ten were willing to pay any sum for anything, be it ever so small a scrap, by the celebrated young artist, who lived like a hermit, whose wife, in name only, had left him a few hours after the marriage and died in her flight. Nothing else was talked of by road or rail, in the field or the drawing-room, and when Mr. Raymond Garton arrived in London, dressed in deep mourning, and looking very pale and ill, society was on the tip-toe of curiosity to see him, and cards were left at Snowdon Villa in shoals, but for the present he contented himself with riding daily in the park and nodding to his numerous acquaintances, always dressed, of course, in the deepest mourning, and looking properly grave and sad. After he had been in London a few days a note came from Messrs. Wheeler, the solicitors to Lillian's estate. He smiled slightly, and his eyes glittered as he looked up to his mother, who had received notice of Lillian's death before he had arrived, and had received him with increased nervousness and crape plentifully wet with tears.

"Here is a note from the solicitors, will you let James say that I have gone on there if any one calls?"

Mrs. Garton murmured "yes," and looked at him nervously.

"Is it anything to do with poor Lillian's affairs?" she said, brokenly.

"Yes," he said, looking up curiously. "Do you know how her father's will stood?"

"No—no," she said, shaking her hand.

"Ah," he said, "rather favorably for me I think; I have not really thought about it yet though. Poor Lillian's death so thoroughly upset, I may say unnerved me, that I have thought of nothing."

And he sighed deeply and walked to the window. His mother followed him hurriedly and stood beside him.

"Raymond," she commenced. "You have not told me much about her—about how she died," and she commenced crying.

He turned almost fiercely. "I thought I told you everything!" he said, trying to speak sadly. "She died in the nurse's arms at a little place called Narin, in Italy. She was dying the whole of the journey—I told you that, I think?"

"Yes," sobbed Mrs. Garton, "you told me all that, but did she not mention any of us, me—or—or Mr. Grantley? No last message?"

"No!" said Raymond, curtly. "She said nothing."

And his restless eyes settled for a moment on her tearful face, with a scrutiny totally unnecessary.

Already the demon suspicion had entered his breast.

Mr. Wheeler, the senior partner of the celebrated firm, greeted Mr. Raymond Garton with warm respect. He was grieved to hear of the sad affliction that had befallen the family, and had postponed all business relating to the large and extremely valuable estates until now, in deference to the sorrow Mr. Garton must be suffering, &c., but had thought it best to postpone a meeting no longer as the amount at issue was so large.

Mr. Garton looked down upon the carpet, and then with tearful eyes impulsively held out his hand.

"You are aware, I suppose, that the whole of Mrs. Grantley's property descends to you?"

"Yes, and no," said Mr. Garton. "You will understand my reluctance to enter into business of such a character, but I suppose it cannot be helped?"

"Well—" said Mr. Wheeler, stoutly, "there should be no further delay."

"Well, well," replied Raymond, with a sigh, "then we must" and he sank into the leather chair, which he had arisen to resume.

"You asked me whether I was aware that the estates devolved upon me?"

Mr. Wheeler nodded respectfully, and turning, unlocked a tin case which was labeled—

"Garton estate."

"As I am her guardian I know of course, the text of Mr. Garton's will, but, I am sorry to say, that I am entirely ignorant of the bulk of it. I believe there was a clause which placed me in possession of the estates of poor Lillian if she died before she was twenty-seven, or married without my consent. Was there not?"

"Not quite correct, my dear sir," said Mr. Wheeler, blandly; "the clause ran if the late Mrs. Grantley married before she reached the age of twenty-six."

"Twenty-six, was it?" he said. "Dear me, I thought it was twenty-seven. Poor girl! she died in her twenty-third year."

"Yes, she did," replied Mr. Wheeler, with a legal sigh. "And you are, therefore, Mr. Garton, the next in possession."

"But Mr. Leonard Grantley?" said Raymond Garton, calmly, though his eyes moved restlessly under the spectacled gaze of the lawyer. "Will he not make some difficulty?"

"Well, he might have done so," said the lawyer, in a thoughtful voice. "To tell you the truth, Mr. Garton, I have grave doubts whether the will would stand against his suit—you must remember our firm did not draw it up—but Mr. Grantley has only this week refused to hold any communication with us on the subject?"

"What?" exclaimed Raymond Garton, leaning forward with a crimson face, "does he dare to—"

Mr. Wheeler stared with astonishment, and said hastily—

"You did not hear me out, sir; he will not lay claim to or touch one penny of the Garton estate."

It was Raymond Garton's turn to stare with astonishment.

"I beg you will excuse my heave," he said, with a winning smile. "The fact is, I have reason to believe that my dear ward's death was accelerated by the conduct of this young man, and I naturally felt angered and indignant at the mere supposition that he would lay claim to her wealth. You understand me?"

"Perfectly, perfectly," said the lawyer. "There is nothing between you and the estates, save a few formalities, such as the certificate and proof of death."

Raymond pulled out his pocket-book.

"There," he said, with a sigh, "is the certificate of my poor girl's death and burial. The signature is that of the priest of the village —— Narin. She lies in the corner of a most beatiful little churchyard," he continued, again making delicate use of the pocket handkerchief—"a most beautiful spot; I have had her name cut upon a small Latin cross, and, and—" here it is presumed his emotion stopped him, for he paused and sat down again with his face in his hands.

"Be calm, my dear sir," implored the solicitor. "I am sure you have done everything in your power."

"I have," and his eyes sparkled under the shadow of his hand.

Here he rose to go.

"I will leave the certificate with you," he said.

"If you please, sir," said the lawyer, "I will lose no time in getting it proved and filed, and will communicate with you as quickly as possible."

"Thank you," replied Raymond Garton, "pray suit your own convenience. Good day," and shaking his hands, he put the handkerchief away, and trod softly down the stairs.

CHAPTER XLVII.

IN POSSESSION.

When the spring came Mr. Raymond Garton's establishment was transferred from St. John's Wood to a noble mansion in Park Lane, and Mr. Raymond Garton quickly gave the nobility and aristocracy lying in that Elysium of "ton" cause to open their eyes. Always fond of luxury and the beautiful, now it was in his power to give full scope to his costly ideas, he provided himself with a palace for a dwelling house, and surrounded himself with every possible luxury. His carriages and horses outshone the young Duke of Brilliante's, who had hitherto held the palm. His servants, in number and magnificence, surpassed those of the Dowager Crowndiamonds, who prided herself on her perfect body-guard; his box at the opera faced the royal one, his subscription to the big charities eclipsed the great benevolent Earl of Draughtesbury's, and his dinners made the feasts of Lord Chemington look poor and niggardly.

The fortune he had grasped was enormous; he set about spending it magnificently, and still wearing the pleasant smile, and murmuring with the musical low-toned voice, and greeting all with the well bred, quiet, but overwhelming welcome, he gathered round his kingly dinner table and filled his magnificent ball rooms with the very best blood in the land. Surely he had striven hard for the prize, had wrestled in agony for the victory, and now he held the prize and had gained the victory, should he not enjoy the reward and be happy? Ah! there's where it was! The men and women who ate of his costly dainties, drank his priceless wines, criticised his pictures, rode his thoroughbreds and ordered his magnificently attired servants about, saw him ever with the charming smile and placid face, and muttered with an envious sigh:—

"Ah, Raymond Garton is a happy man, and he ought to be!" But they had not seen him after the guests had gone and the lights shone dimly in the empty ball room, or in the silence of his bed chamber, hung round with costly tapestry and smelling of oriental perfumes. They did not see him then without the smile and the serene brow; they did not see the face haggard and drawn, and the eyes restless with the ever-increasing dread that kept his heart in a constant glow of excitement. They saw nothing of this, but it was there nevertheless, and though Raymond Garton grasped all in his white hands that he had plotted and schemed for, he found the joys he expected but bitter apples to the mouth and weariness to the soul. Yet when the black night was passed and he rose from his dream-haunted sleep to fit on the mask for another day, and saw the splendor around him that made itself obvious by the very jewelry, costly diamonds and emeralds on his dressing table, he told himself that he would go through all again, and more, were it necessary, to gain the wealth he had won.

As before, Mrs. Garton lived with him and played the part of hostess, but it was only played; her nervousness seemed to increase day by day. To his mother he was always kind, and to his servants as pleasant spoken as ever, but occasionally there would be bursts of passion that showed themselves in a word or a look that told of the hidden fire beneath the calm and sunshiny surface. His picture gallery was extensive and ran around two sides of the house. A young artist who had failed on canvass and therefore felt entitled to set up as critic, had been deputed to the arrangement of the gallery.

Raymond Garton one morning stepped into the gallery and commenced carelessly looking at the pictures. He was attired in a dark blue velvet jacket, loose and comfortable in the neck and sleeves; in the snowy wristbands turned over the coat sleeve, two large diamonds scintillated, and on the fingers of his white and ladylike hand jewels of immense value shone and glittered. He strolled carelessly along the tesselated floor, pausing every now and then to examine some new purchase, and to utter a commendatory "hum," or to shake his head and frown. The young artist met him at the bend of the hall.

"Ah! Mr. Redman," he said, with his pleasant smile. "Nearly got your pictures in form, eh?"

"Yes," replied the young man, "very nearly. Do you approve of the way in which they are arranged?"

"Quite," was the instant reply, spoken graciously; and he took the young man's arm and walked a few paces on.

"That's a good piece of coloring," he said, pointing his gold eye glass at a little bit of sunset.

"Very fine indeed; I purchased that for you at one hundred and fifty pounds."

"And very cheaply too," said Mr. Garton, pleasantly. "Have you been making any further additions?"

"A few more," said the cicerone. "This for instance," he said, walking to the end and pointing to a girl's head, most exquisitely drawn and painted with a life like coloring. It was the portrait of Lillian Garton.

Raymond Garton walked up to it carelessly and raised his eyeglass, then started and turned upon the young artist.

"Do you know whose that is?" he asked, almost fiercely.

The artist looked surprised.

"That is one of Grantley's," he said, "the only one I am sorry to say, we have in the gallery. His pictures are extremely high priced, but also very difficult to purchase at any figure."

"I do not mean the artist," rejoined Mr. Garton, eyeing him with glittering, suspicious eyes. "I—I mean the portrait itself?"

"I do not, sir," was the reply, and Mr. Redman looked up with some astonishment at the pale face.

"A fancy portrait, I should think," he said. "It is too beautiful for a real——"

"I did not ask you to express your opinion of the merits of the picture," said Mr. Garton, sternly. "Be good enough to remove that picture immediately."

"Sir—" commenced Mr. Redman.

"But what?" hissed Raymond Garton, glaring at him fiercely; "take it away, take it away at once, this day, this hour; and remember I will have no single picture of Leonard Grantley's in my house. Do you hear?" And clenching his eyeglass with a vicious snap, he stole away along the corridor and down the stairs, with his usual cat-like tread, leaving the unsuspecting Mr. Redman, who had never heard of the Grantley romance, in a state of bewilderment at the sudden passion of his usually calm and pleasant patron. That morning was crowded with incident for Mr. Raymond Garton. At the foot of the staircase the footman stood waiting, and with deep humility informed him that the carriage was ready as he had ordered it to be.

"And I am not dressed!" replied Mr. Garton, glancing at his exquisite attire. "Keep it at the entrance," he said, "I will be ready shortly," and he turned up the stairs again.

As he neared the portrait again, he averted his eyes and hurried past with an inward shudder. Mr. Redman had left the gallery. As he passed from the hall his footmen, in their splendid livery, threw open the doors for him, and closed them with a bow that would have honored a prince. At the end of the passage stood a little table, half concealed behind a pillar, and on the table stood the lovely face, smiling with a mournful sadness, where the artist had set it down for a moment. Under the impression that he had left the seeming portrait in the gallery behind him, Raymond Garton felt a cold chill thrill through him at the seeming apparition, and stood for a moment with frozen limbs and starting eyes; then he caught up the portrait and with an oath dashed it to the ground.

Alarmed by the noise of the falling frame on the marble flooring, Mr. Redman ran to the spot and found Mr. Raymond Garton standing over the fragments. At the sight of the artist he suddenly turned, and with the pleasant smile said:—

"Ah, Mr. Redman, I have knocked your portrait down. Scarcely my fault, was it, considering the dangerous perch you placed it on? Never mind. Here James, take this broken picture into the lumber room."

And then he turned and ran lightly up the stairs, but paused at the top, with his white hand resting on the balustrade, and waited until the footman had gathered up every fragment of the portrait and walked away with it.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

THE CONVENT.

To Lillian, for we will call her by her worldly name still, the winter passed as if in the shadow of a dream. She found within the thick stone walls the solitude and repose promised her, but not the peace of heart. Attired in the spotless robes of the sisterhood, she paced the chapel whose floor was dyed a thousand colors by the stained windows, and whose air was thick and balmy with the burning incense, or ravishing with the solemn tones of the grand organ, with a face still and calm, but with eyes that lit up every now and then with a wistful longing that came enshrined in tears. Often during the long months, when the wind was howling and the evensong was floating like heavenly music through the window of her cell, she seemed to hear the soft tone of Leonard's voice breaking through the harsh latin words of the hymns; and when she knelt before the sublime representation of the Holy Virgin that hung above the altar, she thought that one she knew could have limned even a more perfect face and form than that, and the tears that fell upon her veil and were put down by the aged priest as those of repentance and devotion, were the outpouring of a heart that longed day and night with an insatiable thirst for one more glimpse of the handsome face, one more kiss from the form she loved.

She knew or believed that such thoughts and longings were sinful, and she tried hard to keep them away, but they came like the soft fluttering of fallen leaves, and as the winter grew into spring they abode with her altogether, until the convent life, with its monotonous quiet and beauty, its simple talk and ceaseless restraint, became at first irksome and at last positively hateful; so that by the time the leaves came upon the trees in the old convent garden, she would have given all she possessed to pass through the cross roads with uncovered head. "Dead! surely the curse has recoiled upon both houses, and the Draytons as well as the St. Aubyns writhe under the ban."

Then he sank down on the grass again and covered his face with his hands. The sun had sunk almost behind the low range of hills when he rose, and shaking himself wearily replaced his hat, and bending low over the stone cross kissed it; then he turned, and leaping the gate walked towards the village. Half way he paused, he turned and looked up at the nunnery. He felt heart-broken and unfit to face human beings yet a while; he would climb the hill and perchance listen to the evensong, which would at that time be sung.

Not a soul was on the road, everything was still with the calm of approaching night. And as he walked up the steep ascent he could hear his own footsteps crushing the gravel, and to avoid the noise stepped on to the grass and heath of the hill. As he reached the iron gates and leant on his stick, wiping the perspiration from his knitted brow, a voice, one voice only, broke out into the evensong. He took off his hat reverently and stood with it in his folded hands leaning upon his stick. As the Latin words floated on the air in sublime harmony, the mellow, deep intonation of the voice changed to one of closest attention and at the "misere nobis" he started with an exclamation of surprise.

"That must be!—ah, no it cannot be!—yet no other woman I ever heard before can sing that note so! There is the very quiver, the very ring of it, as I have heard her sing it hundreds of times!" and he turned to the blank wall, as if he could see through it, with an air of pained perplexity.

Suddenly the voice rang out again, with the "Jesu Coronam!" and this time Lord St. Aubyn threw down his cap and sprang to the gate in a fit of madness.

"It is her voice or her spirit's, I will swear!"

Horror and madness seemed to give him strength, and he had scaled the great wall, clinging to the freize work of the stones, almost as quickly as I have written it, and the top he looked over. There was a nun with her head bent over her book, walking slowly, very slowly, towards the chapel. Something about her figure seemed familiar to him, and his heart throbbed mightily within him.

If he was not quick she would have passed under the shadow of the great wall and be lost. Yet, what madness! he was following an impossibility! She was dead, lying beneath the marble cross, in the churchyard in the valley. At that moment the nun turned and saw his head above the wall. She turned pale and dropped the missal from her hands. St. Aubyn uttered a low cry, and clinging where he could, and cutting his hands and legs against the sharp flints, fell to the ground, and jumping up sprang to her side. Both stood staring at each other for a moment speechless! Then Lord St. Aubyn caught her arm, and, in a voice hoarse with emotion, cried:—

"Lillian!"

The blood rushed to her face at the old name, but her lips were white as she breathed:—

"Lord St. Aubyn!"

"It is she!" he cried, catching her to him in a mad joy. "She is not dead! Oh, God! I knew it could not be!"

"Dead!" echoed Lillian, struggling weakly, and feeling faint; "who says that I am?"

He struck his forehead with his hand and looked at her wildly.

"Ah! Who says that you are?" he cried. "The who—? Yonder gravestone—" and he pointed to the valley.

She looked bewildered, but held up her hand with a frightened gesture, as the great organ pealed out, and the voices of the nuns rose in the vesper hymn.

"Tell me what you mean?" she said, looking round hurriedly.

"No, no," he replied, eagerly, "there has been some villainy in all this; rather you tell me what has happened while there is time. The vesper hymn will last an hour. I—Oh, God! Miss ——are you Miss, though; are you—Oh, tell me!—are you married to Leonard Grantley?"

She turned white, and threw herself up.

"I am," she said, with bated breath.

He turned his head away with a gesture of pain—surely this was retribution!

Even at that exciting moment he remembered the dark night, the cold bleak sands and the voice that sent the curse upon the winds.

"Then what are you here for?" he said, eagerly.

She bowed her head and remained silent.

He caught her hand again, and whispered eagerly:—

"Do you wish to remain?"

"Oh, no, no, no," she replied piteously, looking up at him wistfully.

He turned to the gate and examined the lock.

She smiled sadly and shook her head.

"They are iron," she said, simply.

He turned to her with a fierce smile, and caught up a huge stone.

"Sing," he whispered.

Then, as she raised her voice, he struck the rusty lock a tremendous blow. A slight crash was heard, and then he looked round hastily; no one had been alarmed. Again he seized the stone, and struck again, and this time turned to the trembling girl. She looked, and saw him, after doing something to the lock, open the ponderous door slowly. Her heart gave a joyful throb, for she heard Freedom coming through the avenue of Hope. He came back to where she stood with a determined light in his eyes, and sternly compressed lips.

"Can you get some dark black cape or cloak?" he whispered.

She shook her head.

"There is my black robe in my cell, but—"

"Have you to cross the chapel or any place where you will be seen?" he asked quickly.

"Yes," she replied, hesitating and trembling; then pulling herself to her full height, with a charming frown, she said:—

"Stay; I will do it," and glided away.

St. Aubyn crouched in the shadow of the wall, his heart beating fiercely.

The minutes seemed hours, some nun or priest might pass, and see him at any moment. Ah! there was one, and as a priest came towards him, attired in black cossock and bands, with his broad hat pulled over his face, and his hands folded before him, St. Aubyn ground his teeth, and pulled himself together for the spring. The priest must not be allowed to call out, to speak even.

Slowly, with meditating mein, the priest approached, and as he neared the wall St. Aubyn sprang and seized him in his arms; the large hat fell off with the shock, and disclosed the lovely features of Lillian.

St. Aubyn started back with a slight cry of joy, and a smile flashed for one instant across the pale face, then St. Aubyn pressed her arm encouragingly, whispering:—

"Magnificent!—come quickly!" and led the way to the gate.

How the hinges, rusty and dust dry, creaked; yet no one came. The vesper hymn still rolled through the cloisters, and floated out upon the air, and the two figures passed through the gate into the World once more.

PRINCE SADI D'JALMA, "The Man of Mystery."

"LOOK OUT!"

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,

BY ZEMOG.

"Vat a goundries, unt vat a beebles; ven dey vas wantink to say 'lookk in,' dey say 'lonak, oank!'"

I often wonder whether the great mind that conceived the above wonderful saying, couched in such glowing language, ever contemplated its truth, when, emanating from his "honied" lips, the thought had matured into words. Often has it occurred to me that such a brilliant idea could never have been expressed without long and studied deliberation, without its author having an extraordinary conception of human nature, a most clarified discernment of character, a very sagacious penetration of motives and mysteries, a remarkably well informed idea of country and patriotism, and an unbounded knowledge of the universe.

Upon the stage of life, and in the course of remarkable events, only once did the wonderful hero of our sketch appear, and that was when he gave utterance to those words of deep import, at which commentators wept; and when echo undertook the mission to carry them around the world, revolution began its season of incubation. The name of our grand poetical genius is a riddle, and the category of great men fails to solve the enigma. Some biographers contend that he was French; others, that he was a Pole, but some one says he was too short and had too much diameter to be a pole, and finally hints that he was a Portuguese. Again, some historic pretenders—and seemingly on good solid ground—assert that he was an Italian; but the unkindest cut of all comes from some semi-barbarous, unillustrious, ancient document reading footpad, who says he can substantiate, by the most reliable and musty smelling authority, that our hero was a Greek. We are not prepared, however, to dispute the assertions of such powerful and reflecting minds.

It was far out on the Pacific road that a train of Pullman's coaches, and a few bake-ovens, called, for convenience, "second class coaches," thundered on towards the California coast. In one of these "second class coaches" our hero sat. The train gleamed through the entangled brush, glided with a serpentine flash into the shady copse, and soon sped through the high crisp top weeds of the boundless prairie. She looked like a huge monster, a great serpent, only its back visible, as she ploughed through the sea of immensity. Suddenly a speck, which assumes the appearance of a long cloud, appeared resting on the horizon; slowly it begins to shape itself into a dark, dangerous, thick grown woods. As the train was fast approaching this woods, the conductor saw fit to admonish all persons who might be unmindful enough as to spread their elbows like wings out of the windows; so, in every coach he cried, in a high, shrill note not found in the musical scale, and which had been for the last several years attempting to rival the whistle shriek of the locomotive "thi-hic-oods, look out!"

When this gratuitously given information was imparted to the occupants of the coach in which our hero sat, he immediately raised his beaming eyes, shook the ambrosial locks about his immortal head, and with an indescribable eagerness pushed that head out of the window—a crash—a most polygamatic "oonh"—and as quick as a wink the immortal head was jerked in again; but on what was the meaning of the red flush upon his brow, was the other half of the ambrosial locks, the pride of the gods?

If we are to believe the statements of several scientific men, theologists, geologists, botanists and those persons who study the anatomy of animals, our hero was of a very nervous disposition; it was owing to this, perhaps, that he did not speak for some time after having drawn in his head in from the window; but lay with eyes shut, a mystorious look beaming on his much flushed brow, and, to all appearances, in sublime contemplation. After a while he concluded to come to himself (for the old dames were about him with their traditional scent bottles and restoratives), arose, and, like all great men, previous to the delivery of some wonderfully harmonious words, our hero scratched and rubbed (unusually hard) his immortal head, and then, after indulging in this shampoo on the half shell, our never dying poet delivered the sublime sentence quoted at the head of this sketch, in a solemn, deep and melting voice, much after the manner which the man in the tragedy says:—"Can such things be and overcome us like a summer cloud without our special wonder?"

OUR PORTRAIT GALLERY.

PRINCE SADI D'JALMA, THE MAN OF MYSTERY.

Prince Sadi D'Jalma, whose portrait appears on this page, is a native of Teheran, in Persia, where he was born in the year 1839. His father was a dealer in silks, furs and precious stones, and, being wealthy, gave his son, Sadi, a thorough education, including the speaking of six different languages. After finishing his education he became possessed of a desire to travel and see the world, and, suddenly disappearing, he was not heard of for a number of years, during which time he visited the principal cities in Siberia, Russia, China, Japan, Turkey, Hindostan and Egypt, and at one time, while traveling in Turkey with a caravan, he passed his own father, who was going in an opposite direction to Stamboul, but neither knew of the other's proximity. Some time after this he was shipwrecked in the Sea of Azof and lost all he possessed. He determined then to return home, and, having no funds, took "Foot and Walker's" line towards Persia. His journey took him through Circassia, where he fell in with Schamyl, whom the Russians were driving before them, and who at last fell beneath the power of the Northmen. It was here, in the camp of Schamyl, that D'Jalma first beheld the feats which have since given him such a reputation. He made his first appearance as a performer at Astrachan, a seaport town of Tartary, and soon after appeared again before the Shah—this time as an artist, and not as a wanderer. There he created so profound an impression that he was called by the chief, "Prince of the Wonderful." From here he went to Tiflis in Georgia, thence to Odessa, Constantinople, Cairo, Alexandria, Tripoli, Tunis, Lisbon, Madrid, and, after visiting all the principal cities of Europe, opened at Bentz's Circus, at Berlin, Prussia. Here he had the honor of a visit from the Crown Prince and Count Bismarck. While exhibiting there he was secured for a season in the United States by Messrs. Jarrett & Palmer, who were at that time running the Tammany, in New York, but he made his first appearance in America at the Howard Athenæum, Boston, under the management of Josh Hart. He has received many tokens of regard from rulers and high officials. He wears the Eagle of Russia, bestudded with diamonds, received from the brother of the Czar. From the Khedive of Egypt he received a magnificent topaz, from the centre of which glistens a beautiful ruby. While in Constantinople, he was invited by Mustapha Reschid Pasha, mushir and minister of foreign affairs, to visit the palace of Beshik Tasp, and give an exhibition of his powers. At the conclusion of the entertainment Prince D'Jalma was decorated with the Nisham of Honor, and also received a golden crescent with a diamond in its centre. Prince D'Jalma is a highly-finished, talented, pleasing and graceful artist, and in private life he is appreciated as a quiet, unassuming and genial gentleman. At present he is performing in Philadelphia.

THE CIRCUS.—It is amusing to watch the expectation, curiosity and delight which the traveling circuses arouse in the rural districts. New England and the towns of the west and the middle states are pleasrded all the spring and summer with the most gorgeous and expensive show-bills covering, no doubt, acres with horses of the proudest build, and camels and wild beasts, and "the ugly brutes" ambitious performers. They catch you at every place where men do congregate or pass in sparsely settled regions—round the taverns, often opposite the churches, and always in the covered bridges. We by no means despise these rare shows. The fact that the farmers and their wives and children enjoy them so much would save them from our contempt, even if we could not account for their popularity. But, really, the noble art of horsemanship, and the love of beautiful horses, and the curiosity about strange animals, and the admiration for feats of physical strength and address, have always witched the world, and without real discredit to its taste. Then it is certain that the country public grows more exacting, and demands steadily a more excellent and perfect exhibition from its showmen; and the circuses improve all the while, we are told, in comfort, cleanliness, order, and in variety and excellence of entertainment. We always notice that the farm hands and girls in the kitchen bring in the liveliest echoes of the dance music, and the feats of strength and skill do more fancy and legerdemain; but even beyond these, a very keen enjoyment of and fine discrimination between the wit and enjoyment of and fine discrimination between the wit and side-splitting quantifications of the various rival clowns, of reporter, and many beyond measure; it he does not bring an all-co quering badinage and universal spurt of rollicking spirits to the occasion, he is voted a failure! Poor devil! Think of his late to be gay to order twice a day, for two hours at a time, and for six months together! To be compelled to put his laughter machinery agoing when he wants to cry and to cry in his sleeve; and to repeat when he wants to cry and to cry inside; and to repeat when he wants to cry and to cry inside; and to repeat when he wants to cry and to *cry inside

A. B.—"1. A, an Englishman, wrote, composed and copyrighted a song in England, and, for a valuable consideration, disposed of that copyright by legally drawn and stamped assignment thereof to B, the writer an Englishman, who printed, published and sold the song in England. B subsequently came to the United States, and, finding that the song had not been published here, he, as a resident, copyrighted the title of the song as proprietor under the act of congress, July 8th, 1870. Can he maintain his copyright? 2. C, a music publisher and a citizen of the United States, has since obtained a copy of the song from England, reprinted, published and sold the same. Can B prevent C from continuing to sell the song and recover damages for the alleged infringement of the copyright?"..... In answer to your queries we would say that there has been no judicial decision, as yet, given touching the points raised by you. In our opinion the first printing of the song in England delivers effectually any copyright in this country. It has been decided here by our courts that the singing of a musical composition or the recital of a dramatic composition in public is not a publication within the meaning of the copyright law, but to print it for public use is in the fullest sense of the term a publication. In this country it would seem that certificates of copyright are granted indiscriminately to all who may apply, and numerous instances have occurred where nearly the same title, bearing fraudulent intent upon its very face, has been copyrighted. In our opinion, then, the courts of this country would neither sustain B's copyright nor interfere in any way to prevent C from continuing to sell the song in question.

F. S. H.—"1. A and C play draw poker. A deals, B goes blind; C goes in, also A and B make their blind good. Cards are drawn. B asserts a claim of eldest hand by age, and contends he has the last privilege. A passes; C passes also. B then contends that the stake is his, although no one has made a bet, basing his claim on what he calls the age; also claiming that the fact of his having posted a blind bet before the cards were dealt entitled him to the aforesaid age, after the cards had been drawn. B also denied the right of any player to come in after having passed, although no bet had been made at or before the player passed. C contends that B's claims are absurd, and also argues that a player can come in before and afterwards bet, provided he has been made previous to his passing. C also contends that the fact of a blind being made before the cards are drawn does not alter the status of any of the players in the matter of cards drawn and play commenced. Answer to decide a bet?".....B is perfectly correct in claiming the money on the board. He held the age, and as both A and C, after seeing the blind, and drawing cards, passed out by the fact of their not making a bet, B became entitled to the stakes by such default on their part. Had there not been a blind, A and C could have passed, and come in again if B, the age, made a bet, if they thought proper to do so. But the blind totally changed the condition of things, and prevented them coming in after once passing.

JOHN HUGHILL, Indianapolis.—"As treasurer of the Indiana State Billiard Association, a challenge was presented to me by Mr. Parker A. Sunday, the 5th inst., challenging Jacob Schaefer, champion of Indiana. I refused to receive the challenge on the ground that I did not transact business on Sunday, stating that I would receive it on any day of the week. Was I justified in so doing?".....The statement published in our last made it appear that you keep a public house, that your house is kept open on Sunday, that you are present in person on that day to attend to your business, etc. Under the circumstances you were justified in your act in refusing the challenge when presented, although the monetary deposit might have been deferred until next day. Were you a private citizen, doing no business on Sunday, your objection to receiving the challenge might hold good, but not otherwise.

J. D. H., Rutland, Vt.—At forty-fives, when the dealer turns up an ace he may be ordered to discard before play is commenced, because it is immediately evident that he will be unable to say he may turn down the ace and withdraw his played out card if he pleases. It is somewhat like euchre in this respect, i. e., if the dealer intends taking up the trump he must throw out before a card is played. These points rule in forty-fives governing the point. The above is the custom here.

D. R. K., Washington, D. C.—Bill Poole was shot at Stanwix Hall, Broadway, between 12 o'clock, midnight, and 1 o'clock, A. M., on Sunday, February 25th, 1855, in an affray with Chas. Morgan, Tucker, Faugeno and others. He died on Thursday morning, March 8th, following, the ball having been imbedded in his heart during that period. Baker fled the city on a sailing vessel, but was pursued and captured off the Canary Islands not long afterwards. He was tried, acquitted, and at present resides in this city.

SUBSCRIBER.—Your question on "Attempt to Murder," which we replied to last week, has drawn further information from another correspondent, to the following effect: "The hanging for an alleged murder to which you alluded, occurred at Chester, Eng., the culprit being a tramp, named Martin Doyle, travelling in that region with a woman supposed to be his wife, got quarrelsome in her liquor, when he struck her a large stone, left her for dead; was soon after arrested, tried, and hung at Chester."

W. H. S.—1. To become a member of the Order of Elks in full standing we believe you must be connected with either the minstrel, variety or dramatic profession; still, they admit members to certain privileges who do not belong to either of the above. 2 and 3. Get introduced to some member of the order, who will give you all the information you desire. We would not advise you or any young man to go upon the minstrel stage, simply for the reason that there are already too many in that business.

READER OF THE CLIPPER, Boston.—1. In our issue of Oct. 24th, 1869, we published an engraving of the Red Stocking nine, which included Harry and George Wright, McVey and Gould, of the Boston nine of 1871. 2. Leonard, of the Olympics, has not played regularly with any club at the present time. He occasionally played there in the Irvington nine. He ought to make a fine player for that position.

CONSTANT READER, New Haven, Conn.—1. Jem Mace first appeared in this country in May, 1870. 2. Tom Allen, in his duel with Morrissey, agreed to the London prize ring rules. 3. Jem Mace is not considered the champion of England.

CONSTANT READER, San Francisco.—Your inquiry is so obscurely worded that we cannot decipher your meaning. There are no recognized rules for the game of four-handed Casino, which was first introduced as a single-handed game. 2. We have already a correspondent in your city.

J. M. H. G., Baltimore.—1. Dexter's fastest time is 2:17¾. The time made in the match between Ethan Allen with running mate and Dexter was 2:18, 2:16, 2:19. The time of Dexter in this race does not go on the record, as he did not win a heat; a second horse's time is not recorded.

J. C., Chicago, Ill.—1. Doctor ran second and Hesse Hombery third to Nancy for the Chester cup. 2. Alice Hawthorn had retired from the turf years before Nancy appeared. 3. Yes, he ran the day after his match with Flying Dutchman, and was beaten by Nancy.

HORSE, Lynn.—1. Harry Bassett is the best three year old on the American turf, but we are unable to decide if he is the best in the world. His fastest time was in the Kenner Stakes, two miles, covering 110 lbs. in 3:35¾. 2. Dutchman's time for three miles, trotting, has never been beaten.

M. C. H., New Oxford—The most prominent public jockeys here are Palmer, Hennessy, Charles and William Miller, Midgely, Boland, Browne, Hannon, McClelland, Lagion, Rose, Emile Peters and Colston. A letter forwarded to the CLIPPER office will reach any of the above.

CONSTANT READER.—1. D's claim to the stakes, with his full, on the ground that B, who holds four aces, is betting on a sure thing, is ridiculous. A person can bet on a sure thing and win, provided there is no fraud. 2. Suzie is a very reliable and honest trotter. 3. We can give no opinion.

H. A. C., Boston, Mass.—1. The population of the United States and territories, according to the last census was 38,555,983. 2. Do you mean the Roman Catholics and German Catholics in North America, or those in some one locality?

C. T., Springfield, Mass.—1. The fare from New York to Havana, Cuba, is about $45, we believe. 2. The steamers have no regular day of the week for leaving. 3. You can get the CLIPPER there by subscribing for it.

G. W. C. B., Rochester, N. Y.—Hicken and Maguire fought near Perrysville, Cecil Co., Md., $2,000 and the light-weight championship, Dec. 23d, 1868, the former winning in 8 rounds, lasting 50 minutes. Maguire's jaw was broken in three places.

J. D. C., Phelps, N. Y.—Such positions are few and hard to get. Proprietors generally act as their own superintendents. The business might do well if left alone, as few do well in it. You can advertise or not as you think best.

PATRICK CORY, Syracuse.—1. Harness hft. 3,800lbs; hand, 1,220lbs.; both by Wm. B. Curtis, of the New York Athletic Club. 2. We believe Chas. Bennett, of San Francisco, Cal., has put up a dumb bell weighing 160lbs. Not with a spring.

G. R. E., Lancaster, Pa.—1. We have not heard anything to the contrary. Address a letter to him in our care. 2. We think so. 3. Beat is raced better than one who does not.

CHARLIE.—Each player, at forty-fives, is entitled to five cards, to be dealt two or three at a time, as the dealer chooses, but he must himself.

D. C. P., Baltimore, Md.—At auction pitch, C having but one to go, and P having two, and two only, why that put C out without playing the hand, for P gave C double the number he wanted. Guess the question is not correctly stated.

FRED. ALLAN, Boston.—The Atlantics were champions in that year until October, when the Unions, of Morrisania, won the seminal title simply by defeating the Atlantics, two out of three games.

CLUB ROOM, South Boston, MASS.—C had no right to change the piece after it was exposed, notwithstanding he did not remove his fingers from it. The piece being exposed, must be considered played.

INQUIRER.—The riot and fire in Birmingham occurred June 16th, 1839, at the time the London police were brought down to that town to suppress the chartist movement. Lord John Russell was then Home Secretary.

J. K., South Bend.—The striker can, if he chooses, hit at a ball which comes to him bounding from the ground, and can make a base on such a hit, or be put out, as the case may be, even if it were the first ball pitched.

Z. H. L.—1. A playing alone and being euchred by C and D, the latter are entitled to two points. 2. A taking it up and playing alone, C had a right to play alone against him; having euchred A, D takes two points only.

REGULAR READER, San Francisco—Your inquiry is so obscurely worded that we cannot decipher your meaning. There are no recognized rules for the game of four-handed Casino, which was first introduced as a single-handed game. 2. We have already a correspondent in your city.

F. B. A., Murphysboro, Ill.—1. The fastest mile time on record in racing is 1:43, made by both Pedaddene and Salina, at Lexington, Ky., last May. 2. In a race of two mile and repeat, 1:36, 1:44½ would be considered good time.

ADAMIC.—1. If the articles stipulate that the men shall row in 32 foot gilling skiffs, of course you can claim the stakes if the violate the conditions thereof. 2. One has the soft, the other the hard wood.

CLERK, Topeka, Kansas.—1. The dealer cannot look at his first card, but he can do so on his second. 2. The dealer can look at his own cards to see if he has got a natural before he pays the player who holds one.

L. AND T., Paterson.—"Killeen bets Tully $5 to $10 that Jemmie Craddock fall at the water jump, while running in the steeple chase at Paterson in any year. Who wins?".....Jemmie Craddock never fell at the water jump in any steeple chase at Paterson.

BEN, Philadelphia.—Goldsmith Maid is justly entitled to her record of 2:17, at Milwaukee. We have always credited her with it, and our example is now being followed by the sporting press which at first refused to do so.

C. C., Utica.—1. In case of a misdeal at casino the dealer loses the game. 2. He can stop the game and claim the stakes on discovering the misdeal. 3. A sweep is a solid point. 4. He does not lose his deal.

F. C., Syracuse, N. Y.—Tom Sayers' weight was 190 lbs. His opponents of a less weight were Dan Collins, 160 lbs.; Jack Grant, 143 lbs.; Jack Martin, 147; Geo. Sims, 147 lbs., and Bob Brettle, 144 lbs.

S. H. S., Petersburg, Va.—Having elected to go to wagon at the beginning of the race, he cannot afterwards change to harness after the first heat, and the judge had no power to allow the change.

DUNDAS, Troy.—A, having played an ace on the five, thus building for six, B can take it with a 5, but cannot take the build and 4 pot with the 10 he holds.

JAKE MURRAY.—We cannot decide the point until we see the report of the championship committee, which has not yet been promulgated.

C. B., Brooklyn, L. I.—There has been no list of the various variety halls in America, published. You will find most of them enumerated in the CLIPPER's summary of show news.

COLUMBIA, Brooklyn.—If you were throwing rafflers, three fives beat three aces. If it was first throw, then three fives, or fifteen, beat three aces, or three.

S. M., Lancaster, Pa.—Taking out the centre cards from the pack and placing them on the top, is not a fair cut and can be objected to by the dealer.

COVENTRY READER.—Dexter's time of 2:17¼ was beaten this fall by Goldsmith Maid, who trotted a mile in 2:17, at Milwaukee, Wis., against Lucy.

J. C. L., Wellsville, O.—The cards played running 4, 2, 3, 4, 5, B, who played the 5, is entitled to a run of 4, and, if it was the last card, one point more.

KEARNEY'S BEST, Phila.—The game is a tie, for the scores are not counted until the cards are played, and no one point has precedence over another.

W. H. KURTS, Phila.—The Eckford club went through the season of 1863 without a single defeat, and the Red Stockings did the same thing in 1869.

LITTLE SAM, Chicago.—There was no legitimate champion nine last year. 2. Yes. 3. The latest phase of betting ring arrangements. 4. The club. 5. The Chicago nine. 6. About equal.

JULIA, Vicksburg, Miss.—1. We have a correspondent there. 2. The fare from Liverpool, Eng., to Australia, ranges from £40 to £100, according to accommodation. 3. The climate is healthy.

S. N., Miss.—1. There is no recognized champion quoit player of the world. 2. The Athletic, of Philadelphia, is the champion base ball club of the United States.

SUBSCRIBER.—The spirit and true intent of the bet was that C did not weigh 180 lbs. or more. He weighed 184 lbs. and C loses his wager.

W., Nashville, Tenn.—A locomotive has been put together in one day in some of the fitting shops in England, but we do not think that one has been all made from pig iron in ten hours.

W. J. MADDEN.—The opposite party cannot claim two points because D led out of turn; D must take up his card, however, and the lead be given to the player to whom it belongs.

CHIP.—Your question is not very plainly put, but as we understand it, a hand of cards, as follows, 1, 1, 7, 8, 8, counts thirteen, viz., 8 by fifteens, 3 for sequence, and 2 for pair.

RED JACK, Sharpsburg, Pa.—The best time, single sculls, for five miles, with a turn, is 55min. 10sec., by Josh Ward. It was a misprint.

A BOSTONIAN.—We were among the earliest to appreciate and notice the lady's efforts, as you may see by looking over your last season's file of the CLIPPER.

BERNARDO, Newport, R. I.—James L. Thayer started out with a small show during the early part of the last tenting season, but it did not prove a success. He retired for the balance of the season.

CONSTANT READER.—The party you name is not the champion jig dancer. The championship of jig dancing has never been definitely settled, although many persons use that title upon show bills.

J. R. B., Cooperstown.—The contest in the trotting race at Boston was given in our report of the meeting in last week's CLIPPER.

F. A. G., Boston.—We consider that your name was on the list, as it represented you in every way; the mistake in spelling does not matter, since the residence seems to have been given.

JANUARY, Washington.—1. We suppose you refer to John Thomas, but he never ran 100 yards in the time you mention. 2. We never heard that such a person did so.

JAS. M. Y., New Haven, Ct.—1 Address your letters to the proprietor. 2 Custom has abolished the push shot, and the only clause sanctioning it was expunged from the rules four years ago.

JOE P. S., Birmingham, Eng.—Such time is not on record in trotting. Dexter, in a private trial, is said to have trotted a mile in 2:14. Billy Boyce passed a mile in 2:14¾, under saddle.

KEEN KUTTER, Sidwin Island.—Your professional engagement in England when she left. 2. We have no knowledge that a theatre is being built for her in this city.

J. L. H., Denver, Col. Ter.—We do not require a regular correspondent in your city, but whenever anything noteworthy occurs, we would be pleased to hear from you.

F. L. H., Portsmouth, N. H.—First get the opportunity to go on the stage, and the wardrobe will speedily be obtained if you have talents.

A. G.—It is impossible for us to keep a correct list of the scene shifters in the various theatres. Address a letter to him in care of this office.

C. D. W., St. Paul, Minn.—A loses his bet, unless he jumps 18 feet. His catch of running 10 feet and jumping 8 feet will not enable him to win.

J. H. BROWNING.—All questions about professionals and their skill will be found answered in the review of professionals. No averages of pitchers have been received.

REGISTER'S OFFICE.—John Odder was the pitcher of the Old Enterprise Club, of Brooklyn, in the year you refer to, Leland being change pitcher.

D. J. MANLEY, New Orleans.—If the player running home touched home base before the third hand was put out at 2d base, the run counts, but not otherwise.

R. E. B., Bloomington, Ill.—It got mixed up in the newspaper mail and escaped our notice until last week. It is longer than we can give space to for a sketch. Where shall we send it?

INQUIRER, Philadelphia.—We are not as libertine in our views as you seem to think we are, but we are not supposed to be in your possession.

DAN MCGINNIS.—The work you want is out of print, and can only be obtained by advertising for it.

ANDREW, Providence.—At poker dice four sixes beat four aces. Aces are the lowest numbers on the dice, always counting as ones.

J. M., Brooklyn.—Caller Ou won the Northumberland Plate twice, in 1863 and 1864.

AJAX, Pittsburgh.—We cannot give an answer positive enough to decide a wager, but believe he is twenty-seven years old.

R. M., Titusville.—We never heard of the game by the name you call it.

R. & M., Champaign, Ill.—Ole Bull has been compelled, through illness, to give up all his engagements.

J. M., Norfolk, Va.—She is at the Olympic Varieties, Memphis, Tenn.

J. E. C., Elizabethport, N. J.—Edwin Forrest never acted in New York and Philadelphia on the same night.

L. R. M., Boston, Mass.—James Crockett, the lion tamer, died at Cincinnati, O., July 6th, 1865.

J. J. H., Boston, Mass.—John Stetson is not concerned in the management of the St. James Theatre in your city.

LIBERAL.—Rate having been fixed, the first five innings was concluded, the game is "null and void," in fact, no game. Bets are off.

J. D., New Huron.—Liverpool, Eng., had a population of 492,430, according to a census taken in 1867.

L. C. B., Lowell, Mass.—1. You have some back numbers. 2. We do not know where he is at present.

HIGH UP.—Your nine is strong, with the exception of first and third bases, but it is not up to the mark of the champion team.

AN ADMIRER, Louisville.—1. See reply to J. B. 2. Heenan fought twice only in England.

CONSTANT READER.—The blind being 10 cents and the straddle 20 cents it will cost B 30 cents to come in, and C 20 cents.

PHŒNIX, Brooklyn, N. Y.—It is a misdeal, and A, the dealer, cannot take advantage of his own misdoing.

W. E. R., Boston, Mass.—Cyrille Dion holds the champion cup for the United States.

J. B., Sharon.—Tom King defeated John C. Heenan at Wadhurst, Kent, Eng., Dec. 10th, 1863.

OLD READER, Newport, Ky.—You are mistaken. Edwin Forrest made his first appearance in Philadelphia, Pa.

J. KNOX BARND, Iowa.—There have been several dramatizations of the story called the "Hidden Hand" copyrighted.

J. H. F., Philadelphia.—The subscription expires with No. 38 of this volume.

M. K. C., Youngstown.—We are unable to give you the address of the manufacturers of the endless match.

N. R. C., Red Hook, N. Y.—We do not need a correspondent in the locality you write from.

J. L. C., South Bend, Ind.—We shall omit him until you hear something in response to your communication.

N. H. D., Jackson, Miss.—Have ordered it up, and declared to go alone. A cannot play alone.

A. A. H.—A line addressed to the proprietors of those buildings will, no doubt, result in gaining you the desired information.

EUCHRE.—A player can order it up whether he has trumps in his hand or not.

F. A. S., Danbury, Conn.—Thank you, but we shall not need one at present.

RUNNER OF EUCHRE PLAYERS.—Neither of them can play alone if they did not make the trump.

A PUPIL.—See the advertisement of Ed. James, in another column.

JAMES MACK, Lynn, Mass.—The Harvard and Oxford boat race was rowed by four-oared crews.

PEPPER, South Orange, N. J.—1. No; Allen only threw him twice. 2. Very good; you will improve it.

TORONTO.—A is right; the valuation price for the American Consul, in Canada, is taken by the Custom House officials.

SUBSCRIBER, Pittsfield.—We will make enquiries, and let you know next week the best answer we can obtain.

D. C. W., Williamsburg.—D is wrong; the build counting more than 10, he cannot take it with the 10 spot he holds in hand.

J. H. BARNES.—The statement was false. Aaron and Tracy are now in this city.

WILL, Rochester, N. Y.—There is no record of his having fought at all. 2. No.

WILL, Rochester, N. Y.—There is no school in this city for educating pupils for the stage.

C. J. E., Memphis, Penn.—We have already made an arrangement.

C. E. F., Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md.—Write to Ed. James' purchasing agency, as per advertisement in this issue.

M. J. R., Nashville, Tenn.—All right.

J. W. S., Boston Mass.—Miss Charlotte Cushman was born in Boston, Mass., in Nov., 1816.

BASE BALL is pretty well over for the season, and at its close the results of the professional games have awarded the whip pennant to the Athletics, of Philadelphia; who, despite the efforts of a combination of clubs to deprive them of a chance to play for the championship a few years ago, have worked their way to the front, and now stand forth the acknowledged champion ball players of the United States, while of the New York and Brooklyn combination that acted so discreditably in the past, two of them have ceased to exist as legitimate organizations, while the third made such a poor display in the championship contest of 1871 as to cause them to be objects of ridicule. And thus this disgraceful ring of ball players has been overwhelmed in the avalanche which has overtaken the frauds of New York.

TOO FAST!—Through the carelessness of the gentlemen in our composing room, a very annoying error crept into the notice of Goldsmith Maid and Lucy's race on Monday, Nov. 13th, which appeared in last week's issue. After we had left the office, and as the forms were being locked up on Monday night, a telegram was received in the composing room, giving the result of the above race. Being in a hurry to get away, our fast compositors and proof readers made Goldsmith Maid's time, in the second heat, 2:00, when the telegram plainly made it 2:19, which was the correct time. Of course our readers knew that no such time as two minutes had been made, extraordinary as Goldsmith Maid's performances have been, but the error was no less annoying, for all that.

THE VERY MEN, says "Our Jim," who preach peace on earth and good will to men, are now the first to get up rows. It was only last week, at an Episcopal convention held in Baltimore, that a committee on canons was appointed.

GOLDSMITH MAID, who made the fastest mile time on the trotting record, is at last receiving general credit for that performance, several prominent journals that at first questioned her legitimate right to the claim of superiority now acknowledging her to be ahead of all competition. We take a little pride in this fact, as the CLIPPER was one of the very few papers that gave the Maid credit from the first, for making the best time on record.

CHAMPIONSHIP LACROSSE MATCH.

A very exciting lacrosse match was played at Toronto, C. W., on Saturday afternoon, Nov. 11th, between the Toronto club, of that place, and the Shamrocks, of Montreal, champions. Six weeks previous the Toronto team visited Montreal and engaged in a contest for the championship with the Shamrocks, but were vanquished in three straight games. Not satisfied with this defeat they challenged their conquerors to meet them again, and the match under consideration was the result. The first game commenced, and Moffatt and Hughes faced, Toronto taking it. The Toronto men distinguished themselves by their running, landing the ball right into the Shamrock flags—whence either Hooban or Flannery, or Burke or Brennan, with one powerful throw, sent it back to the Toronto defence. For a long time the flags of the latter were in such imminent danger, that the Shamrock defence imagined they might relax a little of their watchfulness; Flannery ventured too far down the field, the ball was brought up, and, before the Shamrock pobut could regain his position, a magnificent shot sent the rubber whizzing through the flags. First game for Toronto in one hour and five minutes. The result was greeted with tremendous cheering, and Toronto stock went up. After a short interval, the second game began. The want of practice and the fatigue of traveling, evidently told on the Shamrocks, who, for twenty-five minutes, had to defend their flags most desperately. At that time game was played by the Toronto Club, the Shamrock umpire, point, cover point and goal keeper, all agreeing that no game was taken, however, though, however stated that he, himself, had seen the ball going through, and accordingly decided in favor of Toronto. From this decision Mr. O'Connell, the Shamrock field captain, appealed, and the match was continued under protest.

The Shamrocks now realised their position. If the third game was lost, their laurels would be among the things of the past. A change was made in the position of the men, Burke taking his old place at the home end and Moreton playing centre field. Flannery paid all his attention to Mitchell, the dangerous Toronto home-man, and the game began. Hughes again took the ball and sent it home to the Shamrock, Hooban took it, passed it to Moreton, who, after disposing of two or three Toronto men, handed it to Burke; being hard pressed, he sent the ball to O'Rourke, and between the two latter it passed no less than eleven times. Burke, during this very pretty piece of playing, kept watching his opportunity. An opening was effected in the Toronto defence, and the ball was sent with lightning speed through their flags. Time, 5 minutes. This game was acknowledged by the Toronto men themselves to be one of the finest exhibitions of skill ever witnessed. The champions called eagerly for the next game, which was a repetition of the preceding one, lasting only seven minutes, and being taken by a swipe from Burke. It was now getting dark, and an agreement having been entered into at the commencement of the match, that the flags were to be drawn at 4.45 P. M., time was called, and the match declared drawn.

What word is that which, if you transpose a letter, it will be its reverse? United—untied.

FOREIGN SHOW NEWS.

Dramatic.

Our customary advices from London, Eng., are up to Nov. 5th. At the Court Theatre, which commenced its season on Oct. 28th, a new comedy, by W. S. Gilbert, entitled "On Guard," was produced. Of its merits and its plot we exempt the following from the Sunday Times:—"Three rather prolix acts are used to evolve a slight narrative, and much fun, of a rather tinselly kind, covers dialogue that is deficient in dramatic power. The piece, too, is weak in construction, and short of characterization and interest. Under these circumstances its reception was naturally stormy, and loud signs of disapproval mixed with the applause the performance elicited. If 'On Guard,' however, has great faults, it has also delicate merits, and these, when backed up by the care the management has taken in decoration, and the skill the actors exhibit in the representation, will enable it to weather the storm that attended its outset. The first merit to be accorded the play is originality, a rare gift in English dramas, and one to the value of which we are sensible. Next comes freshness, and after that a host of minor virtues. The dialogue, moreover, though it leans too much to a form of wit recent in appearance and altogether undramatic, which consists of a play upon words, is at times very good, and the indefensible jokes occasionally produced are compensated for by others of signal humor. What faults the piece has may be removed, and when Mr. Gilbert has taken the advice he will get from the pit and has "cut it down," the remainder will prove an effective and interesting play. Story there is none, or next to none. Guy Warringham, leaving England for military service in Gibraltar, entrusts his young sweetheart, Jessie Blake, whose frivolity he fears though he trusts her better nature to the hands of Denis Grant, an old school friend, who, unknown to the young officer, is already in love with her. Denis is faithful to his trust, though the task he has to discharge is difficult. Many circumstances continue to fasten suspicion on his conduct while thus 'on guard,' and at the close of a painful and self-denying service, he is insulted by the man he has so split at every sacrifice of personal feeling to serve. Then comes an explanation and a happy denouement. There is little in this, but the little is developed amid capital accessories, and but for the injudicious length of certain scenes would have pleased greatly the audience. Act 1 takes place in an excellently painted garden, affording a view of a capital interior, and with such flower beds as were never seen on the stage. Act 2 passes on a yacht, which is finished with real masts and sails, real fittings and decora tions, altogether finer, more elaborate and more costly than any play has received. The third act passes in Gibraltar. When the attraction of such scenery—and it really in its way is unsurpassable—is taken into account, and when allowance is also made for the cleverness of the acting, a more agreeable future for the play than at one time seemed probable may be anticipated." A subsequent notice says:—"Mr. Gilbert's comedy goes much better than it did on the night of its production. It has received the necessary condensation, and is now an effective and certainly an amusing piece." .... No change has taken place at Drury Lane, Adelphi, Princess', Lyceum, Olympic, Strand, Prince of Wales', Globe, Royal Alfred, Parkinson, Alhambra, Royalty, Vaudeville, Astley's, nor Phil-harmonic theatres.....At Sadler's Wells the "Marble Heart" was withdrawn Oct. 27th, and "Lucretia Borgia" was given in its place on the 28th. At the Surrey, the "Mystery of Edwin Drood" was produced Oct. 28th.....At the Gaiety, on Oct. 28th, John Hollingshead's version of Congreve's comedy, entitled "Love for Love," was produced.....At the Royal Alfred, Paul Merritt's drama of "Shot" had been produced..... At the Queen's, "The Tempest" had been produced, with elaborate scenery, which was highly commended, but of the acting, costuming, etc., we reprint the following from a review thereof in the Sunday Times:—"As a spectacle, however, though the whole constitutes one of the most beautiful, elaborate and artistic reproductions ever seen, there are faults. We can fancy a thing much more preposterous than the notion of sending on Miranda in a pair of high heeled satin boots. Such an impropriety should not for one moment be tolerated. The ballet, again, though attired in a beautiful combination of colors, is exactly the kind of ballet the piece should not have. Ordinary fairy costumes of white muslin and green leaves, and flower belle with lights in them, are infinitely more suitable, because less perturbing than the dresses which are employed. * * * We wish the acting could have been better. Here, however, begins the real blemish in the performance. The powers of an actor are severely tested in the effort to present any of the characters of 'The Tempest' as they are in the delineation of the less important characters of 'Macbeth,' 'Hamlet,' 'Othello' or 'Lear.' But the little that is demanded is unfortunate; exactly what English actors cannot give. Nothing can make the average English actor look at home in silk and velvet attire, and nothing apparently can show him that poetry is anything except prose intoxicated and requiring to be upheld. The cast is a good one so far as blank verse is concerned, but the delivery of lyrical verse is simply wretched. Mr. Ryder, who played Prospero, is one of the ablest and best informed actors on the stage, He delivers with good accent, and in traditionary style, the passages in blank verse. In giving, however, the lyrical adieu, with which the piece concludes, he was utterly at fault. The words tumbled out of his mouth with no more melody than they would have possessed had they been a cartload of bricks. * * * From Mr. Ryder to his subordinates is, however, a deplorable fall. Mr. Grisdale, who played the King, spoke the words of his part with the emphasis and delivery of the worst school of transpontine tragedians. When will actors learn that to make a monosyllable into a dissyllable is not to emphasise or accentuate it? when perceive, that to spit and splutter over a word is neither dignified nor artistic. Of the shipwrecked courtiers, none claims praise by any merit of delivery or action, and it is only among the subordinate or imaginative characters anything can be found worthy of praise. Mr. Vollaire's Stephano is quiet and effective, and the performance is thoroughly good and unobtentious. Caliban was presented by Mr. George Rignold with remarkable force. Some exceptions may be taken to Mr. Rignold's get-up, which was different from anything to which we are accustomed. In body the monster had more resemblance to humanity than it is common to assign him. His skin was the color of human skin and was but partially covered with a thick growth of hair. Only in his hands and face was the resemblance to animal nature to be found. His hands had immense claws, such as are found on animals of the tardigrade order, and his lower jaw had formidable tusks, such as belong to the wild boar. The entire animal resembled closely enough the Yahoo, as described by Swift. One objection applies to this, namely, that the false jaw rendered speech difficult and ineffective. * * * Those who object that very little of Shakespeare is given, may be consoled when they think that the less of Shakespeare is spoken the less of him is murdered." The Athenæum points out precisely the same faults, though in more emphatic language.

At Rochester, Eng., during the recent performance of a melodrama entitled "Wrecked in Port," a serious contretemps occurred, by which one of the actors was much injured. In the last scene of the piece, the "villain" has to be stabbed while carrying off the heroine. On the night in question the stabbing was duly performed, and the curtain fell amidst the usual applause. It was, however, then immediately discovered that the impersonator of the villain had been really stabbed, and the poor fellow was found lying bleeding and senseless on the stage. It appeared that a sharp knife had been used by mistake, and the wounded man was rather in a serious one, although the sufferer is now progressing favorably towards recovery.

With the opening of the Darmstadt Theatre has disappeared the great mechanical ship unveiled by Herr Brandt, and which such immense success three years ago at Genoa in the "Africaine." This vessel, mounted by more than two hundred performers, was so constructed that it was made to roll and toss, manœuvred by a simple screw, worked by a single man below the stage. When the "Tempest" was about to be revived in London, negotiations were entered into for the hire of this vessel, but they failed.

Miss Helen Faucit, it is said, will shortly make her farewell appearance upon the stage.

Edmund Falconer is announced to commence a series of provincial engagements at Birmingham, Eng., Nov. 13th, acting in "Eileen Oge."

James Bennett commenced an engagement at Exeter, Eng., Oct. 30th.

At the Amphitheatre, Leeds, Eng., on Oct. 30th, Mr. Henry Loraine commenced an engagement, acting in an entirely new and original play, written by Charles Storm, and entitled "The Face in the Moon light." It was thus spoken of:—"The action of the drama is laid in France, the time 15 4, and the principal events are divided into a prologue and three acts. A more incoherently constructed drama we have seldom had the pleasure of noticing. In the first scene of the prologue we see the Market place of Meurteville, and are introduced to Mark, a fuller, escaped from the galleys (Mr. Henry Loraine), and Baudet, turnkey keeper and late police spy. Baudet tells Rabat that he can gain 3,000 francs by taking Munier, who is Rabat's companion in flight, a proscribed Bonapartist officer, and Rabat agrees to assist in the act of treachery. In scene second, the Office of the Intelligence on the road to Meurteville, Lucille, niece to Munier, betrothed to Victor Amaroue, a young soldier (Mr. Henry Loraine), who plays two parts and Marguerite, her friend, are awaiting the coming of the diligence to meet Victor. Baudet arrives, and Rabat thinking he has on the reward of 3,000 francs for betraying Munier, stabs him. Lucille turns, and, seeing Rabat's face in the moonlight, mistakes him for Victor. She first meets him first, after a supposed lapse of six months in an apartment in the house of Madame Piquet, in Paris, where Lucille is staying, it being the morning of her marriage with Victor; and here was exhibited some fine acting between Mr. Loraine and Miss Florde, the lady artistically portraying the conflicting passions of love for Victor and dread that he is a murderer. They are no sooner married than Victor is called to the wars. In act the second we reach the Hotel of Louis Manuel, in an interview with Lucille tells her that Victor is dead, and that Lebonne, a rich banker, will marry her. She refuses the offer, believing that Victor is living. Suddenly Rabat appears on the scene and demands money of his former comrade, Manuel, who, to get rid of him, shuts him in a cellared forward by a secret panel. He is no sooner off the stage than Victor returns (and it must be remembered both parts are played by Mr. Loraine), and he is at once denounced by Manuel and arrested. Lucille clinging to him as he is carried off, and the exulting tone of Rabat insensibly appearing in the panel. The termination of this act was least effective, and Mr. Loraine and Miss Forde were called before the curtain. Act the third is the prison of Rabat, near at the end of his career. He confesses his crime to Madame Piquet, his aunt, who tells him that he is half brother to Victor, who is now in prison as an enemy to the throne. Rabat, stung by remorse, takes poison and dies. Victor appears, guarded by soldiers, on his way to execution, mourning the body of Rabat as it is carried out. Lucille obtains an interview with him; some fine acting is displayed here, and, just as the fatal sentence is about to be carried out, Marceau de Millebeurs, Victor's friend, arrives with his pardon, and the curtain falls."

Mrs. John Wood and company are to inaugurate the season at the New Oalety Theatre, Dublin, Ireland, on Nov. 27th.

From Lisbon, Portugal, our correspondent, "Elvira," writing on Oct. 29th, says:—"At the Donna Maria Theatre (the Royal Theatre for drama), Victorien Sardou's historical drama, 'Patrie,' has created a great sensation. Senorita Emilia das Neves, Portugal's greatest actress, acts the Donna Dolores excellently. The translation was made by Senor B. J. Sobza Freitas. The Royal Italian Opera (Don Carlos Theatre) opens to-night—the Rei's birthday—with Donizetti's 'Maria di Rohan,' with Signor Ostegni, baritone, in the principal role. Signor Franchini, tenor, and Mme Pritchi and the little American, Miss Laura Harris, prima donna, have been engaged for the season. Miss Harris is a great favorite here; she has a remarkable voice, and is already counted, though one of the youngest, one of the best canatrices in Europe. She will open her engagement in the course of a few weeks as Amina in 'La Sonnambula,' an account of which will be forwarded to you."

From Australia we have advices dated Melbourne, Sept. 23d. The Princess Opera House was opened for a season on Sept. 9th, under the management of L. M. Rayland, when Mrs. Mary Gladstane made her re-appearance, acting Lillian Vavasour in Tom Taylor's drama entitled "New Men and Old Acres," which was then produced for the first time in Australia. The burlesque of "Pull and Pardner Joe" was likewise produced for the first time. An opening address, written by James Smith, Esq., was delivered by Mrs. Gladstane, and the National Anthem was sung by the company. "Lady Audley's Secret" and "Lost in London" had since been performed.....The Zavistowski Sisters opened at the Prince's Royal on Sept. 9th in "Ixion," it being their first appearance in Melbourne. John Dunn acted Ganymede. The auditorium was crowded in every part, and the sisters achieved an unqualified success.....At the Royal Colosseum, Sandhurst, Mr. Rignold was the chief attraction.....At Albert Richardson's Operatic Concert, given at St. George's Hall, Sept. 15th, there were twenty-seven numbers upon the programme, consisting of arias, duos and trios. The concert commenced at eight o'clock, and it was announced that carriages might be ordered at half past ten.....The Gregory Family and Robert Heller sailed on Sept. 16th for India.

Mr. Maeder's Opera Bouffe Troupe has withdrawn all the terrible scenes enacted in the Cemetery Mont Parnasse, Paris, during the riots between the Communists and Government authorities. Col. T. A. Brown visited the grave a few weeks ago, and found everything as secure as when placed there in the spring of '69, even to the same wreaths and little souvenirs. He added another wreath of immortelles to the many which ornamented the last resting place of poor Meaken.

Musical.

At the Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden, London, Eng., the season commenced on Oct. 30th, as announced, with "Semiramide," the principal characters cast as during last season. The performances was successful. On the 31st Mlle Marimon sang Amina in "La Sonnambula," being in excellent voice and achieving a great success. On Nov. 2d "Lucrezia Borgia" was to have been given, but owing to the illness of M'lle Titiens, "Il Trovatore" was substituted, with M'lle Colorabo as Leonora, M'me Trebelli as Azucena, Signor Prudensa as Manrico, and Signor Mendiores as the Count di Luna. On the 3d, "Le Nozze di Figaro," with Mme Fricci, The Royal National Opera Company, (English) at the National Standard Theatre, gave during the week ending Nov. 4th the "Bohemian Girl" and "Il Trovatore." "Maritana," "Martha" and "Fra Diavo'o" were announced for the following week.....At the Alhambra Theatre, the last six nights of the season were announced to commence Nov. 6th. "Chilperic" was to have been revived, preceded by the first act of "Paquita."..... At the Gaiety "La Belle Helene" was still the attraction.

Mr. A. Schmuck, late musical conductor at the Haymarket Theatre, London, Eng., died in that city recently of consumption, at the age of forty seven years. He was born at Pressnitz, Austria, and studied at the Conservatoire at Vienna, where he obtained a silver medal for composition.

Adelina Patti has just left Brussels for Moscow. Thence she will go to St. Petersburg for the rest of the season.

Sir Julius Benedict has received from his Majesty the King of the Belgians the honor of Knight of the Order of Leopold.

Carlotta Patti was expected shortly in Madrid. She has been giving concerts with success at Barcelona.

Mme. Pauline Viardot has been nominated professor of singing at the Paris Conservatoire for the ladies' class.

Dichmont was given on Oct. 31st, for a section of Mr. Sims Reeves against the Edinburgh Choral Union. Mr. Reeves claimed the fee of ninety guineas for singing at the association's concert in November last. The association declined payment in full because of the non-fulfilment of the engagement, and tendered sixty guineas. The sheriff decided that Mr. Reeves' disability was occasioned by an affection of the throat, arising from cold or other causes not under his control, for which he was not responsible. Mr. Reeves having fulfilled two-thirds of his engagement, his lordship awarded two-thirds of his fee, and found defendants entitled to expenses, excepting those incurred by their own proof.

The Allemeniaians Swiss Bell Ringers and vocalists, arrived in Liverpool, Eng., Saturday afternoon, Nov. 6th, and gave a concert in that town on the evening of the same day.

Variety Halls.

There is little novelty at the London, Eng., Music Halls. At the Oxford, the chief attractions have been Mr. Hunter, burlesque; F. Joughmans, bufo; George Forde, patter singer; Mr. Turner, tenor; "Young England" and Little Singer, trapezists; the De Castro family, acrobats; Bale and Brown, on voloipedes; the Misses Louie Rosalie and Lizzie Beaumont, vocalists, and Mr. Fredericks and Miss Julian, dancists..... At the London Pavilion, Joseph Kelm, character vocalist, from Paris; Joe Brown, Ethiopian singer; Miss Grace Harrington, soprano vocalist; Marcus Williams, comic, and Casaim troupe of acrobats; the Sisters Allwood, vocalists; James Hillier, comic; Victor Natator, the man frog; Mr. Stead, "the Cure;" Miss Florence Banger and Miss Bermond, vocalists, were the chief features.....At the Cambridge, Miss Alice Hermite and Miss Silvestre, balladists; Charles Lingwood, vocalist and instrumentalist; Alfred George and Nelly Glover, in a duologue entertainment; "Jolly Little" Lewis, comic, and the De Vere troupe of trapezists constituted the features.

At Glasgow, Scotland, at the Britannia, the following artists appeared:—Messrs. Diamond and Bryant, negro comedians; Miss Reis, violinist; Professor Duval, conjuror; Brown and Hart, burlesque performers; Harry Baldwin, comic; Sons and Miss Elbin, acrobats; Lacy and Laurent, duetists; Tom Melbourne, comic; Sam Brooklyn, dancer; H. West, comic; Mr. Bartell, descriptive vocalist, and Miss Polly Chariton, serio-comic..... The company at the Whitebait was as follows:—Miss Marie Barnes and Mr. J. Hayley, duetists; Professor Duval, conjuror; Mme. Valkensaere, soprano; Miss Reis, violinist; Mr. and Mrs. Carle, duetists; Livingston and Niah, negro performers; Miss Jenny Stanley, serio comic, and Albert Windsor, comic..... The new arrivals at the Royal Alexandra were J. W. Williams, tenor; Sam Redden, negro comedian, and Miss Emma Clifford, serio comic..... The principal performers at the Royal were the Sisters Diamond and Bryant, negro and American minstrels; the Elbin troupe of acrobats, and Miss Milne, soprano.

Arthur Lloyd and company were announced to perform at Port Glasgow, Scotland, Nov. 6th; Greenock, 7th; Belfast, Ireland, 9th and 10th, and the succeeding week at Dublin.

At Birmingham, Eng., at the various halls the following performers were the attractions:—At the Crystal Palace, Miss Emily Randall, serio-comic; the Sisters Claremont, burlesque duets; M'Lean, comic, and the brothers Lenton, gymnasts..... At the Birmingham, Mr. King's troupe of pantomimists; Liskard, the "Musical Momus;" the brothers Walbraiza, gymnasts; Mme Presillian, balladist; Pat Feeney, Irish songs, and Leroni, the "Man with the Iron Jaw."..... At the London Museum, the McCarthy family, in burlesques and dances; Sam Tory, comic; the sisters Anderson, in songs and dances, and Lauson and Garto, comics.

Negro Minstrelsy.

Matthews' C. C. C. Christy Minstrels commenced a season at the Operatic House, Edinburgh, Scotland, Oct. 30th.

With Sam Hague's Slave Troupe were at Liverpool, Eng., on Nov. 6th. Lee, Ginger, "the celebrated American comedian, engaged in New York at an enormous expense," and Charles Herbert, English tenor, were to have made their first appearance.

Circuses.

No changes had occurred at Astley's, the Holborn Amphitheatre, nor Hengler's Cirque, London, Eng.

At Newsom's Circus, Aberdeen, Scotland, Nat Emmet, clown, and his performing goat put in a first appearance Oct. 30th..... Batty's Circus commenced the winter season at Cork, Ireland, Oct. 30th.....Swallow's Circus was located at Preston, Eng., and Cooke's Royal Circus was located at Scarborough, Eng..... Footit's Circus was to have commenced a winter season, Nov. 6th, at Liverpool, Eng.

Miscellaneous.

The two-headed Nightingale combination was at Chester, Eng., Oct. 31st, and Dowby, Nov. 1st.

Tom Thumb and company were at Dundee, Scotland, Oct. 27th and 28th.

THE DYING SPORT.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

"Live we how we can, die we must."—SHAKESPEARE.

"Jack, hand me the sup in the cro there,
I'm as thirsty and dry as can be,
Water? no, it's bad for the blood—brace me up here;
There, I think now that I can breathe free.
Is that Growler? Jack, sin't he a crowder?
He can whip any pup of his size;
He can bring down his game with the flashing eye.

"That chariot," said he, pointing to the great golden car
then closing his immense procession as it was going down the avenue—"that chariot cost me just fifteen thousand dollars. My show was almost ready to take the road; I heard it was for sale, and having seen it I knew it was a nice thing, and so I telegraphed to my agent in London to buy it. Three days after it was shipped and reached here just in time to go into the procession."

This is just the kind of energy that has made P. T. Barnum the greatest showman in the world. One moment's reflection answers his purpose, and when he reaches a determination he exercises all his energies until his end is gained.

"What do you say to putting a big show on the road?" asked Billy Coup, one day, of Mr. Barnum.

"How much will it cost?" was the characteristic reply.

"Two hundred thousand dollars."

"I'll let you know to-morrow."

What visions flitted through Barnum's mind on that eventful night cannot be imagined, but, on the next day, he told Billy Coup that "Barnum's great show" was a fixed fact, and that he, Coup, was to be its manager. It is said that every great occasion produces a man. Here was a great occasion, and, as it was afterwards proven, this was the man. There are very few men who could have managed the Barnum show as Billy Coup has done, for, besides displaying great executive ability and a wonderful foresight, he is always the gentleman, whether dealing with a governor or a canvasman; and, hereafter, when the great Barnum show is mentioned, much of its success will be attributed to its able manager, Billy Coup. Everybody knows what a great success it has been.

Standing over there at the St. Charles Hotel, leaning against the door—there, he turns his face this way—he with the goatee and moustache, tall and slim of figure—that is Joel E. Warner. Last spring I met him, and he said that he was "bound to have some money, or die," and he added that he would "fifty per cent. rather have the money than die." Well, he started out, and met with but little encouragement, still his indomitable energy kept him above water until he got into Indiana, when he found, to his utter consternation, that he was to meet with strong opposition. "Well," he said, "there's just one way to get out of this," and Warner quietly disappeared. Two or three days after a travel-worn stranger stepped into the counting room of Russell, Morgan & Co.'s great granite house, in Cincinnati, and, throwing himself down in a chair, exclaimed:—"Well, here I am, and here I'll stay." It was Warner, and the way that man dis turbed the plac d bosom of quart-bottles of ink was a warning to writists. For two weeks he sat at a desk running off "proof" from his pen, while the printers ran it off from the press, and when he got through, J. E. Warner & Co.'s Menagerie and Circus was among the best advertised shows in America. He courted the muses, too, and fair poetry shed her light upon Warner's wearied brain, while she tipped his fingers with:—

"One summer's eve, amid the bowers
The umpire never peaceful sleeps,
Sleeping 'mong the breathing flowers,
Joel Warner had a dream!
Agonies come richly freighted,
Birds and beasts, from every land,
At his calling came and waited,
Till he raised his magic hand."

The "magic hand" was raised, and Hoosiers and Michiganders filled with "rocs." I met him the past summer at Fort Wayne.

"Well, Warner, what success?" I asked.

"Red hot!" was the answer, and off he started to hire every bill-board and bill-poster and newspaper in the town. As an advertiser he stands never so high," and as a gentleman he is, as Captain Cuttle remarked of his watch, "equaled by few and excelled by none." To-day Charley Castle—ach, of course, everybody knows Charley Castle, and has heard him mention Syracuse—one day Charley Castle lost a beautiful topaz from a ring, and after a thorough search he gave it up as gone; "still," said he, "I'll give two dollars to the finder if he returns it." Warner quietly walked across the street to the dollar store, and bought a glass stone which bore a remarkable resemblance to the one lost. Laying it in a corner, he sat down, and in a few moments delighted Castle by pointing out his lost gem. It fitted the setting exactly, and Charley was happy.

"Well," said Warner, "I wont ask you for the two dollars, Charley, but you must 'set 'em up.'"

"All right." They were set up accordingly, and it cost three dollars exactly. A short time after, Castle made a startling discovery—his beautiful topaz was beautiful glass. There was war in the camp, and in order to move Charley Castle it is only necessary to go and whisper "opaz" in his ear. But Castle is full of tricks too. Out in Ohio, when he was agent of O'Brien's big show—"Great Monster Menagerie, National Natural Kingdom and Aviary of Exotic Birds"—that's what he calls it—a landlord gave him a cross word. "Hitch up them horses," he shouted to his groom, and leaving the landlord a left-handed blessing, he drove three miles away, and showed in an open farm, to a crowded house. Landlords and showmen often have little passages, and generally the showmen come out winners. I remember a landlord in a southern town, who once contracted to keep fifty men, and when the show arrived he had just ten beds in the house. This was rough on the showmen, but the way the landlord suffered was enough to "point a moral and adorn a tale."

WHITE MICE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

The first circumstance that particularly interested me in white mice was what is related of Count Fosco's connection with them in Mr. Wilkie Collins' "Woman in White." I suspected that Mr. Collins kept them himself, and have since found out this idea to have been the truth. He is hardly a very solitary man, and a dog is hardly more sympathetic and congenial to solitary people than white mice.

But my interest in these little waifs being perfectly experimentary, I write this with a view to give the results of my own observation, and to attain something of the kind in return.

They are, in the first place, exquisitely beautiful. In perfect health their skin is whiter than the cotton they so love to make their nests in. In point of fact, as Cousin Feenix says in "Dombey and Son," it is absolutely and exactly the color of fresh cream—a refined white, lost in an exquisite yellow. But at no time do they display this beauty so remarkably as in the third week after their birth. Their eyes are pink diamonds.

What I wish to ask about is this:—How may they be prevailed upon not to eat their young? I think I never have m t anything so observant as the white mouse. Its intelligence far exceeds that of birds; and is displayed particularly in the agreement they make with each other after the production of a litter. As a proof I have noted this: that but a little while since my pair gave me five youngsters, all healthy and pretty. But one—and this is the first day—remains. Through what odd means of communication did this murderous couple come to an agreem nt not to kill the last? The mother, who ate all the others and grew very ill after her meal, protects this as she would her very life.

I certainly made a mistake in permitting the male and female to remain together after it became apparent that my little cage must shortly contain more tenants than it then possessed. But I do not greatly regret it this oversight now; for the reason that I have had opportunity to learn several things which cannot be found by the student in any natural history.

Regarding mice, Aristotle, Buffon and Goldsmith have hit the one thing to say they bring forth several times a year, and must be content with a fate which sentences them to more direct perils than fall to the lot of even so insignificant a thing as the house-beetle. That, is they form prey for weasels, ferrets, owls, traps, rats and each other. Their amazing multiplication alone permits them to exist.

But, for my part I do not find them possessed of the strength they are said to have. The mother, who is extraordinarily large, has as much as she can do to carry her baby. But this she does in a way most amusing. It is a stranger sight, by far, than a cat's method of carrying her kittens.

The peculiarity of a mouse is its curiosity and its powers of observation. Nothing escapes it that it can reach. The moment I allow my little rogues to come out on my desk they begin a general inspection. First they most minutely examine the inkstand. For fear they might fall in it and be drowned, I close the top. This they view as a piece of impertinence on my part, and, by way of defiance, they proceed to force it open again. Next they take a look at my pipe. Not liking the odor of tobacco, they give the bowl only a cursory glance; but are very particular with the stem, and so they continue till, having made their tour, they begin to throw me cautious hints that they would like to be put on the floor. But these I effect not to notice; there is no trusting a mouse.

They seem to remember, through the sense of smell, like a dog. The hand they recognize they will crawl upon. But in taming them the little mouse must be allowed to run about its master at the instant its eyes are open, otherwise it can never be taught a familiarity with him.

Two domestic mice of grey color put together in a cag will have, if kept in a pest of cleig, fresh cotton, their second litter white. Delivery usually takes place twenty-eight days after impregnation. White mice sometimes sing. Their note is not unlike the chirping of a bird. They may be taught more than half a dozen tricks. In Pittsburgh there is a Professor Leon who has white rats and mice both, and, it is said, they perform many most astonishing feats.

I have been told of a kind hearted lady who used to feed her cat with one hundred white mice a week. She raised them for this purpose. I should like to hear from some of the readers of the CLIPPER on this subject of white mice.

JAKE'S MISTAKE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY "LUCIE."

During the latter part of the "late unpleasantness" I had occasion to pass through the lower portion of Georgia, in the secret service of the C. S. I had three men with me, including a Texan rejoicing in the soubriquet of Jake, a great talker and a dry wit. Riding through the rough country we came upon a well filled corn crib, where we halted and fed our hungry and jaded horses; two or three miles further we arrived at the town of A——, where we halted for the night. Supper over, we sauntered into a bar in search of "something better than pine-top." Observing a group of men standing around a table in the rear of the bar, I stepped back to see what was going on. There, pasted upon a rough pine table, was a large, square, skeleton BOX, made of wood, was the deal box, and upon the dealer's right and left, respectively, were great piles of white and red corn; these piles were the chips. Reader, this was "confederate faro." A spirited game was going on when Jake stepped up. As soon as his eyes caught sight of the familiar lay-out his hands instinctively sought his pockets, and he immediately commenced playing; he soon lost all he had and came to me; I made him an advance, and he lost again; going to his comrades, he obtained all he could from them; he played with great care, but the gods favored him not, and he lost.

Jake was in despair; he looked blankly at me for some moments, when suddenly his face changed, a bright idea seemed to strike him; pulling me aside he said:—"Lieutenant, stay here till I come back: I'll beat them fellers yit." And off he darted in the darkness. Surprised at his sudden departure, I did not know what to think. However, I could wait, and see what would turn up. A half an hour passed, and no Jake; I lit a cigar and walked out—came back—a dull hour had passed; I was getting sleepy; my other men had retired long ago, and I was on the eve of following their example, when in popped Jake, mud up to his knees, and blowing not unlike a porpoise. He went directly to the table and laid a handful of red corn on the ace, saying:—"I'll git even with you, old hoss." The dealer smiled, looked at Jake's bet and up in his face; "My friend," he replied, "that won't do; I have not issued any red chips to-night."

Jake was dumbfounded; with a curse, he left the room, and I did not see him again that night, not until the following evening when I arrived in the city of B——; he looked bad as I laughingly shook his hand. "Lieutenant," says he, before I could say a word, "don't say anything about it; I will tell you all; you know the corn crib where we fed, three miles back; well, I run back there and reached through a crack and grabbed the biggest year I could find and turned, run back, shelling it as I run. When I got there, it was red corn, and they wouldn't stand it. I went back the next morning to see the corn in the crib, and I'll be d——d if it wasn't the only red year in the crib!"

AMONG THE SHOWMEN.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY KIT CLARKE.

SUCCESSFUL MANAGERS, TRICKS OF THE PROFESSION, ETC.

The past season was, as a general thing, a very good one, though some showmen did not meet with flattering success. Among the most favored was P. T. Barnum, who, from the opening until the closing day, did a wonderful business with his big show. I met Mr. Barnum in Brooklyn on the opening day, and found him with the old scoop in the shoulders, the handsome curly hair, the old congenial smile and the flashing eye.

"That chariot," said he, pointing to the great golden car then closing his immense procession as it was going down the avenue—"that chariot cost me just fifteen thousand dollars. My show was almost ready to take the road; I heard it was for sale, and having seen it I knew it was a nice thing, and so I telegraphed to my agent in London to buy it. Three days after it was shipped and reached here just in time to go into the procession."

This is just the kind of energy that has made P. T. Barnum the greatest showman in the world. One moment's reflection answers his purpose, and when he reaches a determination he exercises all his energies until his end is gained.

"What do you say to putting a big show on the road?" asked Billy Coup, one day, of Mr. Barnum.

"How much will it cost?" was the characteristic reply.

"Two hundred thousand dollars."

"I'll let you know to-morrow."

What visions flitted through Barnum's mind on that eventful night cannot be imagined, but, on the next day, he told Billy Coup that "Barnum's great show" was a fixed fact, and that he, Coup, was to be its manager. It is said that every great occasion produces a man. Here was a great occasion, and, as it was afterwards proven, this was the man. There are very few men who could have managed the Barnum show as Billy Coup has done, for, besides displaying great executive ability and a wonderful foresight, he is always the gentleman, whether dealing with a governor or a canvasman; and, hereafter, when the great Barnum show is mentioned, much of its success will be attributed to its able manager, Billy Coup. Everybody knows what a great success it has been.

Standing over there at the St. Charles Hotel, leaning against the door—there, he turns his face this way—he with the goatee and moustache, tall and slim of figure—that is Joel E. Warner. Last spring I met him, and he said that he was "bound to have some money, or die," and he added that he would "fifty per cent. rather have the money than die." Well, he started out, and met with but little encouragement, still his indomitable energy kept him above water until he got into Indiana, when he found, to his utter consternation, that he was to meet with strong opposition. "Well," he said, "there's just one way to get out of this," and Warner quietly disappeared. Two or three days after a travel-worn stranger stepped into the counting room of Russell, Morgan & Co.'s great granite house, in Cincinnati, and, throwing himself down in a chair, exclaimed:—"Well, here I am, and here I'll stay." It was Warner, and the way that man disturbed the plac d bosom of quart-bottles of ink was a warning to writists. For two weeks he sat at a desk running off "proof" from his pen, while the printers ran it off from the press, and when he got through, J. E. Warner & Co.'s Menagerie and Circus was among the best advertised shows in America. He courted the muses, too, and fair poetry shed her light upon Warner's wearied brain, while she tipped his fingers with:—

"One summer's eve, amid the bowers
The umpire never peaceful sleeps,
Sleeping 'mong the breathing flowers,
Joel Warner had a dream!
Agonies come richly freighted,
Birds and beasts, from every land,
At his calling came and waited,
Till he raised his magic hand."

The "magic hand" was raised, and Hoosiers and Michiganders filled with "rocs." I met him the past summer at Fort Wayne.

"Well, Warner, what success?" I asked.

"Red hot!" was the answer, and off he started to hire every bill-board and bill-poster and newspaper in the town. As an advertiser he stands never so high," and as a gentleman he is, as Captain Cuttle remarked of his watch, "equaled by few and excelled by none." To-day Charley Castle—ach, of course, everybody knows Charley Castle, and has heard him mention Syracuse—one day Charley Castle lost a beautiful topaz from a ring, and after a thorough search he gave it up as gone; "still," said he, "I'll give two dollars to the finder if he returns it." Warner quietly walked across the street to the dollar store, and bought a glass stone which bore a remarkable resemblance to the one lost. Laying it in a corner, he sat down, and in a few moments delighted Castle by pointing out his lost gem. It fitted the setting exactly, and Charley was happy.

"Well," said Warner, "I wont ask you for the two dollars, Charley, but you must 'set 'em up.'"

"All right." They were set up accordingly, and it cost three dollars exactly. A short time after, Castle made a startling discovery—his beautiful topaz was beautiful glass. There was war in the camp, and in order to move Charley Castle it is only necessary to go and whisper "opaz" in his ear. But Castle is full of tricks too. Out in Ohio, when he was agent of O'Brien's big show—"Great Monster Menagerie, National Natural Kingdom and Aviary of Exotic Birds"—that's what he calls it—a landlord gave him a cross word. "Hitch up them horses," he shouted to his groom, and leaving the landlord a left-handed blessing, he drove three miles away, and showed in an open farm, to a crowded house. Landlords and showmen often have little passages, and generally the showmen come out winners. I remember a landlord in a southern town, who once contracted to keep fifty men, and when the show arrived he had just ten beds in the house. This was rough on the showmen, but the way the landlord suffered was enough to "point a moral and adorn a tale."

WRITTEN AND COLLATED EXPRESSLY FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

INTERLOCUTOR.—Well, Bones, you look a little off color to-night. Did the election hurt you any?

BONES.—Yes, it broke me all to bits. I hain't had a cent ebber sence dat wentival Tuesday. Golly, de boys got a ugly fall, hay, boss?

INT.—Rather a serious dislocation, I believe. Were you in with any of the cand dates?

BONES.—Skuse me, boss, but I radder not talk about dat. Let old tamborine over yonder tell you sumfin funny, to make us laf; I hain't heard anything fanny since de ilection sofin.

TAMBO.—I will ax de gemmen a question in regard to my speech, so dat Bones' attention may be distracted from dat big break down of his friends. Skuse now, any ob us, Bones, for instance, just to make de case plausable like—spose dat Bones should steal a lot of clams——

BONES.—Who ebber see me steal? It's a lie. If any man ebber——

TAMBO.—Ver wrong, ver wrong—its ony spose a case—de boys know dat Bones couldn't steal, no-o—its ony sposin.

BONES.—Well, spose ahead, den; I don't want to make no trouble in de shanty.

TAMBO.—Spose dat Bones was to appropriate—is dat right, Bones? Steal is a hard word.

BONES.—Yes, dat's better. Gemmen don't steal, dey oney get too many fingers in de addin up; dat's from not habbin a fust class system of edducation. I hab made mistakes dis way, myself, and de skoo master dat I tib wid he say dat I hain't no slouch in simpel dishin and sich stuff, and he ought to know. But go on wid you jography.

TAMBO.—What did I leve off, eny how?

INT.—You left off where Bones was stealing the clams.

BONES.—Dat's a lie—I splained dat afore. I kin bring de whole ob Sing Sing and Blackwell's Island to prove dat I can't steal—dat I don't know how.

INT.—Oh, its easy enough to hire witnesses to swear to anything. Some criminal shysters, as we have frequently seen of late, seem to have a lot of professional lying power in their employ, whose duty it is to swear whatever their employers tell them to. While the committee of seventy have their hands in, it might be well to reform these shysters.

BONES.—Dats so—it was ony las week dat a friend ob mine stole a diamond jewelry. I know dat he stole it, 'cause I got a sheer of de purseeds. But our lawyer got two ob his swearers to swear dat at de werry time dat dimond jewelry was stole, my friend was wid dem in Boston, hopin' to get a man wid de noorsigy.

TAMBO.—Did de man git off?

BONES.—Why, ob course he did; de man wasn't guilty, 'coordin' to de oaf ob dese 'fashional swearers, and de jury seplied a verdict ob manslaughter in de six or seventh degree, and dat quitted him. See, dese tings I know. I've hired dese shysters to git me out ob a scrape many a time, and dey always fetch up dere reserves, and de way dese 'fashionals sware is enuff to make a lobbin' angel out ob a murderer. I'm not sure dey don't run such shyster lawyers out ob court. Why, one ob dese shysters, de boys says, was wonst a forgery in England and dey sent him as a convict to Australia, but he 'scaped wid a ticket ob leave, and now he's de boss of de perfeshinal swe-rers. Aint dat high?

TAMBO.—Was de man hung?

BONES.—Didn't I tell you? He ought to been hung, but dey ony transported de forserum as a convict.

TAMBO.—I know, but didn't dey hang de man soon as he got here?

BONES.—No—o—a! he set hisself up as a loryer, and bein' in wid de feeves and buglers, he soon got plenty practis, and he takes out his pay in glitin his pals to swear to anyting he tells 'em.

TAMBO.—And de man hung yes, did you say, Bones?

INT.—You don't understand, Tambo; the man is not only not hung, but he's doing a good business in this city.

TAMBO.—And will de committee ob seventy dissolve deir meetin' widout hangin' him or de 'fashionals?

BONES.—Dat's de seebenty's bisniss. You see, what I nose I nose; I say nuffin at random, de shyster's a forgerum and a convict. Oh, I don't squeal, I don't. I don't know de ropes, I don't; I got my eye on de convict now.

TAMBO.—What did I leff off?

INT.—Oh, let it go; we'll have a little music.

MY DEAREST LITTLE HEART.

BY ARTHUR W. FRENCH.

Say, pretty maiden, where have you strayed?
You promised you would meet me in the glade,
O, surely you are not afraid,
My dearest little heart.
I am waiting here to gather thee,
And when you sit beside me
There's nothing shall betide thee,
My dearest little heart.
Chorus—Say, pretty maiden, where have you strayed?
You promised you would meet me in the glade,
And surely you are not afraid,
My dearest little heart.

The roses sleep, the stars they keep
Their watch above the world asleep;
Then softly to my bosom creep,
My dearest little heart.
Oh, you are such a fairy,
My heart and hand I'll carry
And how I'd like to marry
You, dearest little heart.
Chorus—Oh, pretty maid, &c.

There's no one here to interfere:
There's no one but the sleeping birds to hear
The words I'll whisper in your ear,
My dearest little heart.
Oh, come and linger near me,
To comfort and to cheer me;
My dearest little heart.
Chorus—Oh, pretty maid, &c.

"SKETCHES IN INDIA."

Below we present a copy of a play bill, printed on white satin, sent to us by Dave Carson, an American performer, now in India. It is communicated to the dated Secunderabad, Deccan, India, Sept. 21st, he says:—"This programme was given with good effect before Sir Salar Jung, prime minister of the King of this part of India, which, in itself, is twice as large as Great Britain. The British President, Mr. Saunders, was present in great state. Elephants, camels, palankeens, dust, musquitoes, etc., in profusion. You will see, by the programme, that the entertainment consists almost entirely of pieces in the Hindostanee language, which I am well up in. I hope to be in my native city about the latter part of the spring. I have not done badly here. I am worth, let's see—a wife, a six-barrel revolver, a dog, three tiger skins, a double-barreled gun, a mother-in-law, and between thirty thou and and a million of dollars in my four years of exile."

SMOKING A CIGARETTE.

SONG AND DANCE,
TO MISS ADA HARLAND.

To keep you here a while,
I'll sing the latest style.
It's sure to take,
It efforts you make
Fair charmers to beguile.
No matter what your fortune's small
And you are deep in debt,
You're sure to please the ladies all,
If you smoke a cigarette.
Chorus—Smoking a cigarette,
The jolliest thing, you bet
It is showing
That you're knowing,
If you smoke a cigarette.

Young girls who're just from school,
Prefer that, as a rule,
While you're joking,
You keep on smoking,
And always take it cool.
Old ladies too, who pipes revile,
And 'gainst cigars are set,
Are sure to think you all the style,
If you smoke a cigarette!
Chorus—Smoking a cigarette, etc.

THE ASTOR PLACE RIOT.

BILL OF MR. MACREADY'S LAST PERFORMANCE HERE.

Mr. William Niblo and James H. Hackett engaged the Astor Place Opera House for the purpose of presenting Mr. Macready in a round of his favorite characters, commencing May 7th, 1849, when he was announced to perform the title role in "Macbeth." During the performance, however, a disturbance was created upon a part of the audience who seemed determined that Mr. Macready should never again be heard in a New York theatre, and at the beginning of the third act the lives of Mr. Macready and Mrs. Ocleman being considered in danger, the performances were terminated. A large number of prominent citizens, regretting the insult that had been offered to Mr. Macready, and imagining that the malicious spirit evinced had been sufficiently gratified, requested him to continue his engagement, promising, upon their behalf, support and protection. Mr. Macready reluctantly consented to re-appear on the evening of the 10th, in the same tragedy, and the performance passed off with such comparative quiet that he returned his thanks to the audience for their attention. Quite a different scene was being enacted outside, an immense concourse of rioters being there assembled, who made such violent attacks upon the building that the military, who had been called out for its protection by Mayor Woodhull, finally discharged their muskets, killing twenty-two individuals and wounding thirty-six. Mr. Macready had, during his performance, been kept in utter ignorance of these demonstrations, and on attempting to leave the theatre found his life in such imminent peril that he was obliged to escape in disguise, wearing the hat and coat of one of the actors. This was the last appearance of this tragedian in New York. We append a copy of the bill of the last performance:—

CUPID'S FOIBLES, FOLLIES AND FANCIES.

WE PARTED SO STRANGELY.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.
BY G. J. GUILFORD.

We parted so strangely—not even "good bye,"
Not a token or word of adieu;
The hand of your destiny crushed you, and I—
I was flying from hope and from you.

We parted so strangely—not even a kiss,
As I left you, "one moment," I said,
I knew I was going from infinite bliss,
But dare not return as I sped.

A knell at my heart, you remember I spoke
Of its sorrowful teachings before,
A knell at my heart, which but fate could evoke,
Appalled as I stood at your door.

Appalled as I stood at your door, for I knew
That our parting was final on earth,
And hopes of the future, ah, dearest, with you,
Were buried almost at their birth.

We parted so strangely, and yet should you ask
Why I came not again to your love,
The infinite God will absolve me the task,
And reply at your advent above.

INSULTS TO WOMEN.

A writer, on the above subject, to the Boston Herald, of Nov. 18th, in answer to a previous correspondent, says:—"She seems to think that the woman of to-day is not a God made but a man made article; that her nature has been distorted from its natural bent through subordination to the will of man. Well, it is just here where the woman suffragists and their opponents split—one side maintains this view and the other the opposite. When she next says that man compels woman to be the bearer of children regardless of her consent and many times regardless of her probable ability to survive this terrible drain upon her vitality,' I would ask what business has a woman to marry who objects to having children, or is afraid to run the necessary risks? The bride, when she enters the holy estate, knows, or ought to know, that this is one of the very probable contingencies of matrimony—that it is, in fact, the chief corner stone of the institution. Besides it isn't natural for women to incur serious harm in having children. Any respectable physician, I have no doubt, will bear me out in saying that, in the popular estimation, the perils of childbirth are very much overrated; that the perils of abortion are very much underrated. 'Student' next admits that a state of independence and equality on the part of women would tend to lessen the number of offspring, and that women generally have not been willing mothers. She also thinks that physiology does not sanction the custom, almost universal in this country, of man and wife occupying the same couch. Well, physiology holds a divided opinion upon this point, and I think there is more to be said in favor of than against the custom. In continental Europe, among the nobility, I know another custom prevails. Why? Because among them marriages are nearly always marriages of convenience; that is, they are generally made up affairs between others than the parties themselves, and that love is the last element taken into consideration. The nobleman thus mated generally has his morganatic wife, upon whom he expends his love and with whom, no doubt, he spends after the opera. Vive la bonbon. His high-born spouse, alas! sometimes has her special lover, too! This bodily propinquity among married people begets a oneness of mind and heart; it nourishes and strengthens that divine plant, love. The talk of its being unhealthy is mostly gammon. Statistics prove that married life is the healthiest mode of existence for adults in spite of this custom. The risks arising from it are comparatively so insignificant, and the benefits so decided, that it would take a good deal of preaching to make the American people change the habit. 'A Woman' thinks I speak from a very low stand-point of observation in regard to marriage, and especially on the subject of maternity. But my argument is up to the level of nature; it is as high as humanity. I trust that I will not be understood as desiring to transfer the 'insults to women' on the street to the women in home life, or to indulge in any such wise view of the case in regard to all that belongs to her wifehood or motherhood.' My point is simply this:—That the advocates of woman suffrage, the better class of them, are foolishly trying to eliminate the element of sexual passion (one of the most potent influences in the world), from their problem of social regeneration. They see it is the great stumbling block which stands in the way of their 'emancipation,' and they wish to ignore its existence. Now, that's silly better than we should take a sensible and rational view of the thing? Hasn't it some rights which we are bound to respect. 'It is for woman to take the initiative in laying the axe at the

The average of runs earned by the Mutuals was 3 and 24 over to a game, that of their opponents being 2 and 19 over. It should be remembered that the Mutuals played with a dead ball through the season, while the majority of the Athletic games were played with a lively ball.

THE TURF.

TROTTING MATCHES.

The rain storm of Tuesday, Nov. 14th, sadly interfered with the trotting sport of the past week, for several important matches and sweepstakes had been arranged to come off. On Monday, the 13th inst., two interesting trots at Fleetwood Park attracted a large attendance. The first was a sweepstakes trot for a purse and stakes of $500, mile heats, best three in five, in harness, for which the contestants were R. Loomis's g g Grey Eddy, M. Roden's b m Belle of Orange, J. Murphy's br m Lady Wells, and H. Casey's ch g Hickey. Betting was spirited, pools selling as follows:—Grey Eddy, $100; Belle of Orange, $55; Lady Wells, $40; Hickey, $20. In the first heat Belle of Orange took the lead, and opened a wide gap until passing the three-quarter pole, when she began to shorten her stride, and Grey Eddy gained rapidly on her, but failing to get up, was beaten by a length in 2:40¾; Lady Wells being third, and Hickey last. Grey Eddy still continued the favorite, notwithstanding Belle of Orange had won the first heat. The latter held a lead of three lengths to the half mile pole, but turning on the ascent of the hill on the third quarter Grey Eddy passed her at the three-quarter pole, and beat her to the score by three lengths, Lady Wells six lengths behind Belle of Orange, and Hickey a bad fourth. Time 2:38¾. The third heat was won by Grey Eddy, after an exciting finish with Belle of Orange; Hickey third, a dozen lengths before Lady Wells. Time, 2:42. The odds on Grey Eddy winning now rose to $100 to $15, taken freely by those who fancied he showed signs of quitting in the previous heat. The race was confined to the favorite and Belle of Orange in the fourth and final heat, the former winning the race and money by three lengths in 2:41¾; Belle of Orange second, eight lengths before Lady Wells, and Hickey last. Summary:—

The second race was a match between Ben. Daniels' bay mare American Girl and Peter Mane.'s bay stallion W. H. Allen, mile heats, best three in five, in harness, for $1,000, American Girl having to carry 10 lbs. more than Ben. Daniels' weight, while Allen had to carry catch weight. The difference between the respective weights carried was 30 pounds, but notwithstanding this, American Girl was the favorite at $100 to $30 in the pools. As will be seen from our report below, nothing but the coming on of darkness, and consequent postponement of the race, saved the backers of the mare from a sweeping defeat, for after the second heat the extra weight told on her, and she tired badly at the finish of the two last heats.

First Heat.—Allen got a length the best of the send off, but American Girl passed him at the turn and led a clean length at the quarter, in 35 seconds, and the same at the half mile in 1:10. Allen now went up to her, and the pair trotted like a double team to the three-quarter pole, where Allen broke up badly, leaving American Girl to jog home an easy winner by three lengths, in 2:27.

Second Heat.—No betting, as it appeared certain that American Girl must win. She led a length to the quarter in 37½ seconds, and two lengths at the half in 1:13. Allen closed steadily in coming up the hill, and the struggle home was very exciting, American Girl winning by a short neck only, in 2:29¾.

Third Heat.—Allen took the lead, but was soon passed by the mare, who led two lengths at the quarter in 36 seconds, and one length at the half mile pole in 1:11¾. On the third quarter Allen closed steadily, and was at her shoulders as they turned into the home-stretch. A fine struggle home resulted in Allen crossing the score a head in front of the mare in 2:26.

Fourth Heat.—Allen led a little at the start, but American Girl quickly collared and passed him, leading him a length at the quarter in 36½ seconds, and three lengths at the half mile in 1:09½. Coming up the home-stretch Allen steadily gained on the big mare, was lapped on her at the draw gate, and trotting steadily home, won the heat by a length in 2:38½. Darkness coming on, the race was postponed.

The following day (Tuesday) being unfavorable for trotting, rain falling incessantly, the further continuation of the above race was postponed until Saturday, a report of which day's proceedings may be found on one of our inside pages.

On Friday, notwithstanding the counter attraction of the team race at Prospect Park, there was a good gathering at Fleetwood to witness two matches that were announced. The first was between Ben Daniels' bay mare Topsy, to wagon, and W. H. McMahon's chestnut mare Grace Bertram, in harness, for $500, mile heats, best three in five. These two mares had trotted a match the previous week on even terms, both going in harness, which was won so easily by Topsy that her driver thought he could beat Grace another match, Topsy going to wagon and the other to harness. The owner of Grace Bertram was of a different opinion, and the match was accordingly made. Before commencing, Grace Bertram was the favorite at $100 to $40; the Westchester division eagerly backing their representative at the current odds. The favorite won the first heat, by six lengths, in 2:35; the second heat by the same distance, 2:36; and the third heat and race still more easily in 2:36.

The second race was a match between G. Smith's bay gelding William and W. Bone's bay gelding Rock of Ages, for $500, mile heats, best three in five, in harness. William was the favorite at $100 to $50, and he justified the confidence of his backers by winning the race after throwing away the first heat on purpose to make the betting more favorable. But the ruse was too transparent, and still long odds were laid on him after losing the first heat. We give the summary:—

THE GREAT TEAM RACE AT PROSPECT PARK BETWEEN Honest Allen and Kingston, with Running Mates—Kingston the Winner.

TIME, 2:19½ | 2:17¾ | | 2:18¾ | 2:20.

The return match for $1,000 a side between W. Borst's chestnut stallion, Honest Allen, with a running mate, and T. Carpenter's brown gelding, Kingston, with running mate, mile heats, best three in five, came off on Friday, the 17th inst., at Prospect Park. Originally fixed for the previous Thursday, the unfavorable weather caused a postponement of the race until the next day. The adjournment, as is almost invariably the case, had a bad effect on the attendance, which was confined almost exclusively to the regular habitues of the trotting track. It will be remembered that the same teams had trotted a similar match, for the same stake, at Fleetwood Park, the previous week, in which, after six heats had been trotted in two days, of which Kingston had won the first and fourth and made a dead heat of the third, the judges awarded the race to Honest Allen and mate. The extraordinary decisions of the judges in some of the heats were severely commented upon, and the general impression among the uninterested spectators was that Kingston was justly entitled to the race. Mr. Martin, the owner of Kingston, declared he could beat Honest Allen in a similar race for $1,000, to trot on Prospect Park course, and Mr. John O'Donnell at once planked the money on behalf of Allen and mate.

The day was very pleasant and the track in capital going order for this advanced period of the season. Before the race the pool selling was brisk, each of the contestants being alternately the favorite at the slight shade of odds of $105 to $100. Both teams looked in splendid condition, Borst handling the reins over Honest Allen and his running mate, Slippery Jim, while Tom Carpenter piloted Kingston and his companion, who was in much better fix than at Fleetwood Park.

First Heat.—Honest Allen and mate had the pole, and were a length in front when the word was given. Kingston got on even terms at the turn, but only for a moment, as Allen drew away again and led half a length to the quarter in 33½ seconds. Kingston flew up on the lower stretch, but was quickly caught; not until Allen had opened a gap of two lengths at the half mile, in 1:08. Kingston gained a little in ascending the hill, but there was two full lengths between the teams as they entered the home-stretch. Carpenter made a resolute effort to catch Allen and mate on the last quarter, but failed to do it, and was beaten to the score by two lengths, amid great cheering, in 2:19¾.

Second Heat.—Kingston and mate were still the most in demand at the pool box, and sold for $220 to Allen and mate's $210. A fair send off was had, but Allen, breaking on the turn, was passed by Kingston, who took the pole and led two open lengths at the quarter in 36 seconds, and the same at the half mile in 1:08. Borst tried desperately to recover his lost ground, and Allen and mate responded gamely to the whip, but they failed to fairly reach Kingston and mate, who went under the string a length and a half ahead. Time, 2:17¾; the last half mile having been trotted in 1:09½.

Third Heat.—Betting $100 to $15 on Kingston and mate. Another fair start, Allen and mate having a shade the best of it, but failed to maintain it, for Borst going wide on the turn, Kingston and mate showed in front there and led half a length at the quarter in 33½ seconds, and a full length at the half in 1:08, being the same time as in the two previous heats. Carpenter gained another length on the third quarter, and, after a splendid struggle home, won the heat by a length in 2:18¾.

Fourth Heat.—No betting, but plenty of offers to wager $100 to $10 on Kingston and mate. The favorites quickly showed ahead, were a length ahead at the quarter pole, in 36 seconds, and three lengths at the half in 1:09. Borst tried hard to reduce the gap, but his running horse, Slippery Jim, tired badly, and although Honest Allen well justified his name by trotting honestly and fast, he could not make up the lee-way his pet companion, and Kingston and mate won the heat and race by six lengths in 2:20.

After the race was over Mr. W. Simmons, the owner of the Honest Allen team, offered to match them against the Kingston team for $1,000 a side, the same race over again, and was at once accommodated by the owner of the latter, to trot over the same course on Monday, the 20th inst. Summary:—

GOLDSMITH MAID vs. LUCY.

Philadelphians were in a fever of excitement on the afternoon of Monday, Nov. 13th, consequent upon the announcement that those equine celebrities, Goldsmith Maid (who, having deprived Dexter of the proud title of champion of the trotting turf, is now in the very zenith of her fame) and Lucy, were to trot on the Suffolk Park Course, where the Maid so distinguished herself a few days before. People of all grades journeyed to the scene, some in carriages, light wagons, etc., others by rail and more on foot, notwithstanding the walk from the city to the track was a lengthy one. Over four thousand people are estimated to have been present. The track was not in good condition—in fact, it was in a most wretched state, the heavy rains having rendered it exceedingly heavy. Of course, no one could be prevailed upon to accept any kind of odds on the Maid winning the race, but the speculation upon time was quite spirited, $100 to $75 being offered that she took the first heat in 2:21, and $100 to $50 that both of the other heats would be trotted under 2:19. The judges were Gen. E. F. Beal, J. J. Butterworth and Chas. Lloyd. The race, in some respects, was uninteresting, as it was a foregone conclusion that Lucy would not have a ghost of a chance.

First Heat.—As usual the Maid had the pole. After a false start a good send off was had, and the beauties crossing the score almost neck and neck, Dobie's pet slightly in advance, which position was held to the quarter pole. Passing it the Maid gave a wonderful burst of speed, and opened up a gap of three lengths, which position was maintained to the half mile pole. Just in advance of this Hickok gave Lucy her head and she made a brilliant effort to shut out the daylight between herself and rival, but without avail. No perceptible change in the relative positions of the animals was observed at the three-quarter pole; but after passing it, and entering the turn on the home stretch, both trotted splendidly, the favorite still in the van. Near the score Hickok laid on the whip, and endeavored to get up to the Maid's flank, but Lucy could not reduce the distance, and the queen was declared the winner of the heat by three lengths. Time—first quarter, 0:35½; second, 1:12¾; third, 1:49; fourth, 2:25¾.

Second Heat.—Both animals came down the course at a rattling pace, Lucy one-half length in advance, which position was soon wrested from her. At the quarter pole the Maid led by a length, and although her antagonist was moving beautifully, continued to gain up to the half mile mark. Here Lucy gained slightly, and valiantly seemed to close up the gap between her and her fleet-footed adversaries. Down the home-stretch both animals came at a fearful pace, the Maid leading four lengths, which advantage was maintained to the last. Time—first quarter, 0:34; second, 1:09¾; third, 1:43¾; fourth, 2:19.

Third Heat.—This was almost a repetition of the preceding ones, the Maid leading almost from the start. Both mares went off their feet several times between the quarter and home-stretch. Time—first quarter, 0:36; second, 1:11; third, 1:46½; fourth, 2:23. Summary:—

TROTTING AT PATERSON, N. J.—Although the glories of the once popular Paterson race course have departed, some exciting sport in the way of trotting is still occasionally witnessed there. On Thursday, the 16th inst., there was a goodly assemblage of the leading turfmen and trotting sports of Paterson on the track to witness three matches which had been arranged. The first was a match against time, in which Dr. Quinn, the newly elected coroner of Passaic county, had backed his roan mare to trot a mile in 3:10, in harness. This feat she failed to accomplish, for the judges decided that she lost the match by 11 seconds, and the disciple of Esculapius had to pay the basket of wine which constituted the stakes. The second event was a sweepstakes trot, mile heats, best two in three, in harness, for which the entries were:—Col. Rafferty's brown mare Lady Rafferty, F. Hoxie's grey colt, and F. Scott's grey gelding. The latter was withdrawn under the mistaken idea of his owner that by so doing he could save a play or pay bet of $100 between his horse and Mr. Hoxie's colt. The betting was $50 to $30 on Lady Rafferty, who won easily in two heats. Time, 2:51; 2:49¾. The third race was a match, one mile, in harness, between P. Rafferty's brown gelding, J. C. Todd, and J. Bell's sorrell gelding, Liquor Saloon; the loser to pay for a basket of champagne. The betting was $100 to $70 on J. C. Todd, who won easily, but no time was announced by the judges.

A LUCKY ESCAPE.—Harry Bassett and Joe Daniels had a narrow escape from serious injury, if not death, owing to gross carelessness on the part of the Baltimore and Wilmington Railroad Company, by which line they, with two other horses, had been shipped from Baltimore, after the recent meeting, for Elizabeth, N. J. Instead of going through direct, as promised, the car which contained them was switched off at Philadelphia. The car having no brake, one of the wheels was blocked with a piece of stone, but this becoming displaced, the car, which was on an incline, started off and soon had acquired great momentum, finally running into two cars standing upon the track, when it was switched off in time to prevent its dashing into an advancing train. Joe Daniels was considerably bruised, but upon examination the only apparent injury sustained by Bassett was found to be the knocking out of one of his front teeth. The company are deserving of severe censure for neglecting to have the car provided with a brake, the existence of which would have prevented an accident which might have been far more serious.

QUEEN MARY, the famous thoroughbred mare, who has given birth to some of the greatest celebrities of modern times, including Blink Bonny, Blooming Heather, Broomielaw and Blinkhoolie, was destroyed on Oct. 23d, having been rendered useless for breeding purposes. She was twenty-eight years old as of belonged to H. Chaplin, M. P., of Blankney Hall, near Lincoln, Eng.

THE RING.

SKEYTE DEFEATS BURGESS.

During the latter part of October Charley Skeyte, of Walsall, and Harry Burgess, of Liverpool, Eng., met in the Northern Circuit, to decide their claims to fistic superiority at catch weight, for £5 a side. The match was a purely impromptu one, and was ratified on the previous evening. Both men are well known in the P. R., Burgess being decidedly the senior performer. When in condition he scales 146lbs. His performances are as follows:—Beat J. Izzy, £10 a side, 29r, 50m, near Liverpool, Jan. 6 h, 1858; beat Jem Clarke, £100 a side, 31r, 1h 30min, Home Circuit, June 18th, 1861; beat Patsey Marley, £50 a side, 41r, 1h 21min, Hilbre Island, Wales, July 29th, 1862; beaten by Bob Smith (the Black), £25 a side, 43r, 53min, Point of Ayr, Sept. 15th, 1863; forfeited £100 to Topper Brown, of Liverpool, Feb. 17th, 1863, (over weight). Skeyte's only previous performance of note was a victory over Jem Munro, £10 a side, 71r, 2h 57min, Midland district, July 29th, 1867. The meet was at Hasbingden Grange, near Blackburn, where a select company assembled, the tip having been well kept. The usual preliminaries were quickly arranged, Skeyte being esquired by Billy Mills and Charley Slack, and Jack Graham did the needful for Burgess. A competent judge having accepted the office of referee, the men commenced business a few minutes after 10 o'clock in the forenoon. Both men appeared anxious for business, and dispensing with the usual sparring, feinting and dodging made play with both hands at the head and body, until Burgess in leading on with the right duke was staggered with a severe left hander on the mouth, from which the ruby immediately followed, deciding first blood in favor of Skeyte. In the second bout Skeyte having warmed to his work cross countered Harry on the jaw and brought him to grass, the second event, the first knock down blow being awarded to the Black Country representative. From this point Skeyte took a strong lead, and invariably fought him down at the end of every round. Suffice it to say, that at the expiration of seven minutes, during which time five rounds were got through, Burgess was compelled to cry a go and Skeyte was hailed the winner. The loser was badly punished about the figure head, considering the short time the contest lasted, the only punishment displayed by Skeyte being a severe gash across the left fingers from the effects of the first round.

LETTER FROM JOE COBURN.

Anent the display of science fixed for Thanksgiving day, the 30th inst., at New Orleans, about which there seems so many hopes and fears, we lay before our readers a letter to a friend in this city from Coburn:—

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 12th.

FRIEND ——.—In regard to the coming contest between Mr. Mace and myself, I have concluded to write you a few lines to inform you how I am getting along. The reason Johnny Grim left me was because the weather was so warm he could not stand the work with me, and which was necessary for me to have, so I have engaged the services of Tom McAlpine, who I am doing very well with. I am training at Dan Hickok's, some six miles from the city, a very fine, healthy place, and, to tell you the truth, never felt better in my life, and more confident of success in the coming conflict. In regard to my colors, I shall not change them. I take a benefit at Turner Hall on Saturday, Nov. 25th, and shall probably wind-up with O'Baldwin, as he is expected here soon. Business is very dull here: river very low; no sickness in this place of any description; healthiest place I know of. Yours, etc., JOE COBURN.

O'CONNOR AND CARR.—We are in receipt of a letter from Mike O'Connor, stating that upon his return to Dubuque, Iowa, on Nov. 8th, the City Marshal had him arrested, in order to break up the match. He was released on the 14th inst., upon giving bonds, however. As the second deposit has not come to hand for either man, the match is off, Nov. 18th being the date for the staking of the last deposit.

HARRY BRYANT, a well known backer of pugilists and other sporting men, was accidentally thrown out of a trap on Oct. 16th, and after lingering in an unconscious state until Oct. 22nd, he expired as the result, in Princess of Wales, North street, Whitechapel, London, Eng. An immense number of sporting men followed his remains to the grave.

JEMMY SHAW has resumed business as a publican at the Old Stores Inn, No. 66 Hurst street, Birmingham, Eng. We hope the venture will prove profitable.

JACK BOYNE, who was beaten by Tom McAlpine and Mike Donovan, is now at Jackson, Mich., we learn, fitting up a gymnasium.

PEDESTRIANISM.

FOUR-MILE RACE.—The announcement that a race of four miles, for £25 a side, between two such noted pedestrians as E. Jones, of Islington, and W. Mills, younger brother of the renowned Teddy Mills, attracted a large throng of spectators to the Lillie Bridge grounds, West Brompton, Eng., on Oct. 30th. We need hardly say that Jones, the older man by three years, ran exceedingly well at long distances in his best day, and has for some time enjoyed, and deservedly so, considerable reputation as a clever trainer. On this occasion he received 350 yards start from Mills, who, since he came out, has run very well, and very nearly attained first-class form. Opinion was generally in favor of his pulling off the race under notice, and after the start it looked as if he would come up to those expectations, as he gained rapidly on the leader—so much so, that 2 to 1 and 3 to 1 were offered on him at one time. However, when apparently running very strong, whilst Jones was anything but the better for his exertions, he suddenly stopped at the end of the eighth lap (two miles and a half) and left the track, Jones going on and finishing the distance at his leisure. This termination of the affair provoked much comment, as might be expected.

A QUARTER MILE RACE, for $100 a side, Keraronwe and Isaacson the contestants, was run on Sherbroke street, Montreal, C. E., on the 13th inst., at 5.45 P. M. Keraronwe led from the start and to within twenty-five yards of home, when he tripped and fell, Isaacson passing him and winning. Isaacson then offered to run the Indian any day the past week, 600 yards, $100 a side. Mr. O'Neil acted as judge for Keraronwe, Major Lebranch for Isaacson, and Mr. N. H. Hughes as referee.

W. FARRANDS, the well known cricketer, and W. Gilpin, a tx amater, both of Philadelphia, ran 250 yards—from James Wright's to Nelly Pearson's and return—for $50, on Nov. 18th, the former winning in a canter.

AQUATICS.

THE GREAT FOUR-OARED MATCH.—We learn from our latest foreign files that the fourth deposit of £25 a side for the match between the Taylor-Winship and Chambers crews, appointed for decision on the Tyne, Eng., on Nov. 22d, was made on Oct. 30th, Percy staking for himself and colleagues, and J. Adams putting down the needful "pony" on behalf of the Winship four. As anything but kindly feeling exists between the parties concerned in this match, there is no gathering of the opposing schools when the deposits are made, the money being simply placed in the hands of the party named in the articles. On that case both crews were out upon the river, rowing with coxswains, Chambers' crew rowed as far as the head of the Meadows, and then went back by the South Channel, towards Jewitt's boat house. Winship's crew returned down the river before reaching the Meadows House. Both fours are now in active training for the event, and Kelley, Chambers, Percy and Bright in particular have done a lot of walking exercise.

RADLER TO THE WORLD.—In the issue of Bell's Life dated Nov. 4th we find the following challenge from the champion sculler, Jos. H. Sadler:—

You will greatly oblige the undersigned by inserting this in your next, as, since my arrival in Newcastle, I find there are some of our rowing friends disputing my right to the championship, which I won at Halifax by beating all comers. I now beg to say that if they think otherwise I am open to row any man in England, save the Tyne champion course, a fortnight after the great four-oared match, for £50 a side; or, if this is not accepted, I will row any man in the world over the same course; if from any other country but England, for £80 a side, and will allow £100 for expenses. Apologizing for encroaching on your valuable space, I remain, yours, &c., J. H. SADLER, champion sculler of the world.

Newcastle, Nov. 24.

RUNNER AND SHEPHERD.—A scullers' race, for £30 a side, took place on the usual course from Putney to Mortlake, on the Thames, Eng., on Nov. 24, the competitors being W. Spenser and G. Shepherd, both of Chelsea. The former won very easily, paddling past the Ship at Mortlake seven or eight lengths in advance.

YACHTING ON THE POTOMAC.—The yachts Fannie Bell, Echo, Emma Latham, Fanny and White Cap contended for honors for the third time at Washington, D. C., Nov. 9th. The Fannie Bell won, the Echo second, Fanny third, Latham fourth, the White Cap having withdrawn.

THE SPRINGFIELD BOAT CLUB is the title of a new organization at Springfield, Mass., the officers of which are as follows:—President, Edward Mason; vice-president, A. J. Warren; secretary, H. W. Vanvours; treasurer, Geo. R. Otis.

CRICKETERS vs. BASE BALLISTS.

The Boston Base Ball Club closed their season for 1871, on Nov. 9th, with a grand match at base ball and cricket between eleven cricketers of Boston and the Boston base ball eleven. The Boston nine went to the bat first, and through the fine bowling of Eastwood and Kimball they were disposed of for the small score of 38, of which George Wright obtained 15. On the side of the cricketers but twenty runs were scored, George and Harry Wright's bowling, backed up as it was by splendid fielding, being too much for the eleven. Bates's score of 7 was the only average score obtained. The extras were but 2. In the second innings the base ballists obtained 77, of which George Wright contributed 27, McVey 17, and H. Wright a dozen. The eleven then went in with 96 to get to win, of which they made but 44, Eastwood scoring 15 and Kimball 11. The following is the score:—

In the afternoon a game of base ball was played by the same opponents, and was easily won by the Boston Nine by a score of 35 to 11.

THE GAME OF CHESS.

To Correspondents.

H. J. M., Joliet.—Correct, as usual. F. H. Curtiss asks another trial for his 4-mover.

G. REICHELM, Philadelphia.—Accept our heartiest thanks for the kindly remembrance, and the welcome batch of games.

IT IS SCARCELY CREDIBLE, but we are assured that the J. A. W. Hunter, whom we quoted a few weeks ago, is "a youth of fourteen!"

Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, Nov. 20th, '71.

THE DUKE has arrived, therefore "let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung." We have been "waiting, only waiting," for his noble dukeness ever since the lection ceased to be an object of interest; but "long looked for came at last;" now let the revels proceed, and the welkin ring with our loud and exhaustless buzzas; let hilarity and gladness prevail in a promiscuous and unconstrained manner; let joy bells be rung, and the brazen cannon pour forth its quiet strains; let the flaunting banner be flung to the midnight blast, and the folds of Russia duck be nailed to the mast, for the Hon. Alex is here; let the neighing steed be hitched to the flying chariot, let the foundered equine take a back seat, and the cheap cabs be brought into line for the comfort and convenience of the hundred dollar committee; yes, verily, let the free and untrammeled citizens of this regenerated metropolis of the land of the setting sun rise early in the morning, put on their best store clothes, and go forth to meet the royal Muscovy duke, who will make his American debut in this city to-morrow, Tuesday, supported by a powerful cast, and the full strength of the company. We shall detail a corps of critics to attend the grand entertainments, whose golden pens, unenvenomed by the gall of bitterness or the blighting fangs of malice, will nothing extenuate nor set down aught not proper to "offend the taste of the most fastidious." We herewith append

OUR MERRY WELCOME.

Hail, noble duck, for whom we long did look,
We're glad you're come:
We waited here in vain—thought you took the wrong train—
In leaving home.
But you reached our port at last, though its a long time past
Since you started.
A storm it must have struck you, and out of your course it tuck you,
When you parted
From the others. The reception down the bay has been waiting every day
At an enormous cost;
Until, as a sort of relief, they all came to the belief
That you were lost.
With all on board; which, of course would have been a pity, and a useless expense to the city,
With nothing to show for it.
But now verrons, noble Russian, in the parade you'll see some pushin
When we go for it.
Beware of pickpockets, is our advice—take your whiskey hot, without ice,
Glorious sampler;
And if you cook your own food, you'll know what you are eating's good—
With dishes ampler—
Hotel life, at the best, will give you very little rest,
With mysterious food—
The composition of which, we candidly assure you is sich
As bodes no good.
If you go to the Central Park late, and they want to charge you at the gate,
Don't pay it.
For there's plenty on that lay, as may be seen every day,
Though we grieve to say it—
Of reporters, too, beware; many of them will dare
To interview you;
They will talk you out of breath, bore you almost to death,
Or, otherwise do you.
So mind what we have told you—when the people first behold you,
Don't look behind:
But proceed along Broadway, while the surging masses sway,
And go it blind.
And now, grand duke, adieu, we have told you what to do,
When you arrive here;
Should you reach home again—you will not have lived in vain,
If you survive here.

.....We think our professional interviewers are overdoing the thing; they are meddling with matters which don't concern them. The latest case is that of a newspaper renegade who went to interview Minnie Ream, who sculps; and what do you think the degraded monster says about this irreproachable young thing? He declares that he "found her in her studio, with arms bare to the shoulders, and her ankles likewise." A man—we don't care whether he is one of our persuasion or not—who will calmly sit in the studio of a young lady bare from the ankles to the shoulders cannot be much, and the sooner such heinous offenders are expelled from the profession the better it will be for the community in general, and studio-us young ladies in particular..... Some people find it very difficult to scrape an acquaintance. "Our Jim" makes the task comparatively easy by saying that the best way to scrape an acquaintance is to use a piece of glass. .....We are told by one of our western exchanges, although it were a deplorable truth, that during the conflagration of Chicago one New York firm lost four hundred pianos. And yet Chicago is not happy; as if the loss of these high-toned instruments does not atone for much suffering in that city. Consider, for one moment, the discord and confusion boxed up in those four hundred pianos; imagine the dire distress and anguish likely to have been beat out of those instruments of torture by embryo Thalbergs but for the happy idea of consigning the entire consignment to the fiery fiend. For our part, we consider that this is one bright spot in Chicago's desolation. .....Property men are generally "well up" in contraptions, and know something about everything; yet they are once in a while taken in, as it were. Now, there's our friend Snodgrass—his right name is Field, but we call him Snodgrass, because it's more enfunnyus, comical-speaking. Well, Snodgrass bought a bamboo cane, which he was going to get a number of his friends to surprise him with some night at the theatre, and thereby make it the happiest moment of his life. But when the presentation committee came to examine this well-merited testimonial they found it to be made of common hickory instead of bamboo—all of which goes to show that in this virtuous city a well-informed property man, even, may once in a while get wofully bamboo-zled.....You all know, dear brethren, that we are a lover of brother Allen and an attendant at his beloved chapel, where we have waited many an hour away in listening to the unostentatious dissemination of the truth as therein expounded. We like brother Allen, because we believe him to be a colored person without guile, who, in his humble way, endeavors to inculcate virtuous principles; and although he occasionnally misapplies his quotations, nevertheless he means well. We visited the chapel a few evenings ago, and were glad to see that the lambs had turned out strong. Before the regular service commenced a marriage was to take place, the parties to which were a colored sister and brother in good standing in the chapel. The ceremony had just been performed, and the newly-wedded couple were walking down the aisle with all the dignity befitting the occasion, when brother Allen, who officiated at the nuptials, opened his hymn book, and read in clear, resonant tones:—

"Watchman! tell us of the night,
What is signs of promise are."

There were some devout ones who did not appear to see where the laugh came in; but there were others, "Hayd persons of the better sort," who showed more levity than seemed compatible with the sanctity of the place. The groom and groomess blushed, and our dear brother Allen concluded amid a titter of cheerfulness..... "Rosedale, or the Fishball," is a new burlesque announced by the San Francisco Minstrels. It there is as much in it as may be found in the fishballs served up at some of our restaurants, it will be likely to go off lively.....And talking about eats and things, we will tell you "how to split a hare." First catch your hare, then grasp his hind legs, one in each hand, and pull in opposite directions. This is copyrighted by act of Congress.....A well-wisher of his race advertises to teach Ole Bull's method of violin playing privately. This is important, if true; the more privately the beginners are taught to play the better it will be for an afflicted people.....And talking about afflicted people, a good thing came under our notice a few days since at our theatrical boarding house, where we have a young girl who does chores. This well-behaved and guileless creature, it appears, has been made love to, on the sly, without a single one of us chaps being a bit the wiser of it, notwithstanding we dog all the boarders and look in their roosts at very inopportune hours. Well, this pure young thing is quite a favorite with our little Evas, precocious Richards, and other juvenile prodigies with which our house abounds. Little Billy Smith is one of these exotics, and the other day while he was conversing with the youthful female domestic, the latter said:—"I am going to leave you, Billy." "What for?" asked sweet William, utterly astounded at the distressing news. "I am going to be married to-morrow night," exclaimed this innocent virgin. "Oh, are yer, though?" says Billy; "may I be one of your bridegrooms?" We drop the curtain on this affecting scene. .....A live Russian Prince—royalty must increase with us for some time to come—and Gallatin's his name, has been giving concerts in this city—without awakening any great enthusiasm, we regret to say. Now we intended to make a first rate joke, something about the gal its in, but we have lost our idea, and can't make it work properly. You will therefore excuse us for this untoward failure. .....We herewith present a few inoccuous rhymes in re—

BARNUM'S SHOW.
Barnum has a great big show,
It is his darling pride,
And if to it you wish to go,
Up Third Avenue take a ride.

Essays and poems written at short notice for those who do not know how to write themselves.....Our Jim" wishes us to say that he would like to have a pleasant suit of rooms, with private table, if desired, in exchange for his company, with all the modern improvements. We don't know what he is up to, now.....Those fault-finding and lazy people who are not satisfied with "standing room only" at some of our theatres, may find room to lie down in others.....If Nilsson continues to get indisposed when the houses are shy, we shall have to call her an ill son-gster. And yet some envious gaiootis declare that we are not funny.....Friends, we must bring our arduous labors to a close, as we have to prepare to meet the grand duke—on his passage up Broadway to-morrow.

City Summary.

Notice to City Managers, their Treasurers and Doorkeepers.

We have recently ascertained that certain parties have been imposing upon our city managers by representing themselves as being connected with the CLIPPER, and seeking free admission and other favors on the strength of such alleged connection. We shall feel greatly obliged to managers, their treasurers, doorkeepers, etc., if they will hereafter refuse free admission to all such parties. The gentleman detailed to report as to what is going on at our theatres, halls, etc., is well known, and he will exhibit his credentials where required to do so. Should we find it necessary to send others, they will pay their way.

LITTLE NELL, the "California Diamond," who did not go to St. Louis, Mo., to fulfil an engagement on account of indisposition, is now in this city, and in our advertising columns announces that she is at present organizing a combination for very short time. Parties desiring to negotiate for her appearance will find her agent's address in another column.

CHARLES MELVILLE, late agent for Hart, Ryman and Barney's Minstrels, arrived in town during the past week.

W. W. NEWCOMB, a veteran minstrel performer, appeared at Bryant's Minstrel Hall on Monday evening, Nov. 13th, in a burlesque lecture on "Woman." Mr. Newcomb was the originator of this style of entertainment, having delivered the first burlesque lecture on "Woman's Rights" in 1851, while engaged with Fellows' Minstrels, in this city, at 444 Broadway. He was warmly welcomed upon his re-appearance. Later in the evening he performed several burlesque magical feats, which created much mirth. In the first part, a new ballad entitled "Flowers, Fresh Flowers," was sung by Louis Braham; J. A. Barney sang "My Little One's Waiting for Me;" Dave Reed, "Buzz Away Muskeeto;" Charles d'Alberte's baritone voice was heard to advantage in "Dublin Bay," and W. F. Stanley sang with good effect "The Bird on the Tree." In the second part, in the revived sketch of the "Live Ingin," Dan Bryant evoked much laughter by his clever acting of the title role. The singing of the "Old Kentucky Home" continued a feature of the week.

"HUMPTY DUMPTY" continued to attract a large attendance during the past week, at the Olympic Theatre, where on Thursday afternoon, Nov. 16th, the complimentary benefit tendered to Eph. Horn, the veteran minstrel performer, was likewise successful. The programme commenced with an Ethiopian sketch entitled "Stage Fright," performed by Nelse Seymour, Frank Girard and Master Morrissey; it was followed by a vocal duet by Stanley and d'Alberte, giving place to songs and dances by little Jeannie Yeamans; then Dan Bryant, assisted by W. H. Brockway and Little Mac, performed "Daniel in the Bryant's Den;" Tony Pastor sang a number of comic songs; Morrisey and Emerson performed a double song and dance, and Eph. Horn, Jr., a banjo solo. The beneficiary then appeared, assisted by Nelse Seymour, in an act entitled "The Professor's Return," after which Mme Martens, M'lle Gretchen and Mons. Martens gave "Tyrolese Warblings;" J. W. McAndrews, the Watermelon Man, in "Pastimes on the Levee;" Fred. Foster, character songs, and the performance concluded with a ballet pantomime entitled the "Four Lovers," with G. L. Fox as Bibo the Clown, supported by C. K. Fox, Imre Kiraly, J. L. de Bonay, George Evans, Messrs. Tyson, Atkins, Jones and Miss Haniola Kiraly.

MISS EMMA ALFORD, character vocalist, was the only new appearance at Tony Pastor's during the past week. Her performances, of which we have heretofore often written, continue of the same excellence, and these combined with an original sketch, entitled "Brigham Young; or, Life Among the Mormons," and a change of acts in the programme, constituted a pleasing entertainment. Miss Celia Ilerd, in songs; the Gorenfo Sisters, in dances; Tony Pastor, in comic songs, among them a new local one, entitled "In the Bowery," being particularly well received; Sam Devere, in Dutch eccentricities; W. J. Bailey, in performances upon the concertina; Kittie Le Roy, in a jig; Peter Cannon, in Irish patter songs; Johnny Queen, in character dances, and Frank Kerns, Ben Mason, Frank Girard, J. A. Hart and C. F. Seabert, in sketches, being salient features thereof.

AT THE SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS, among the novelties of the past week we may mention the singing of "Why Have My Loved Ones Gone?" by C. F. Shattuck; "Uncle Mumphy's Rocky Road," by Charley Backus, which was very favorably received; "My Little One's Waiting for Me," by Wambold, was finely rendered and cheerfully accorded; Billy Birch's humorous rendering of "My Policy," and C. Templeton's singing of "Meet Me Nannie, Blue Eyed Nannie." The festival song and dance of "Kome and Kiss Me," by Bobby Newcomb, Charles Gibbons, J. Cheever and Ed. Kennedy, which has become a distinctive feature, was retained upon the bills. Charley Backus and Billy Birch created much merriment in "A Scene from a Domestic Drama," and as "Our African Cousins." The "Shadow Pantomime" was revived and new tricks introduced for the closing feature of the programme.

AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE, "Eileen Oge" failed to attract large audiences during the past week, which was not owing, however, to any demerit in the performance or lack of exertion upon the part of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Florence; but rather to the fact that the drama had been kept before the public too long, and that it had been announced that it would have been withdrawn after Nov. 11th. A change of bill will be made for the present week. The "Ticket-of-Leave-Man," which was originally produced in this country at the Winter Garden by Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Florence, and had an extended run, adding both to the fame and bank account of these artists, will be acted this evening, Monday, 20th. It will, we think, materially increase the attendance.

THE HOLD UPON POPULAR FAVOR that Mr. E. A. Sothern secured in this country during his early professional career, by the performance of Lord Dundreary, has even been surpassed by the cordial welcome and continued support given him during his performance of the same character at Niblo's Garden. During the past week the attendance has been uniformly excellent. As the character admits of ad libitum remarks, Mr. Sothern varies his performances in some degree almost nightly, thereby surrounding them with an air of freshness which adds to the enjoyment of those who attend for the second or third time.

AT WOOD'S MUSEUM, Master Percy Roselle closed the third and last week of his engagement with the evening performance of the "Boy Detective," on Nov. 18th, in which he had acted during the entire engagement with signal success, considering his tender years. On the occasion of his benefit, on the 17th, the farce of the "Irish Tutor" was added to the bill, in which Master Roselle acted Dr. O'Toole, and was repeated at the matinee and evening performances of Saturday. At the usual matinees during the week, save on Saturday, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hall acted in the burlesque of "Masaniello," which was preceded by the drama entitled the "Golden Farmer."

"ROSEDALE," whatever defects it may have as a drama, critically considered, ever proves popular with the masses of our theatre-goers. After playing the old comedies, excellently acted, to quite limited attendance, the announcement of this drama, with its author, Lester Wallack, in the leading role, sufficed to attract a large audience upon its reproduction on Nov. 13th, while the average attendance of the week was excellent, nearly every seat in the auditorium being occupied. It was mounted with freshly painted sceneries, among which the gypsy dell by starlight, and the conservatory at Rosedale, decorated for the ride ball, were conspicuous for their beauty and elaborateness of finish and design. Out of the original cast none appeared during the past week, as follows:—Lester Wallack as Elliot Grey, John Gilbert as Miles McKenna, G. F. Brown as Farmer Green, and Mrs. John Sefton as Sarah Sykes. As the excellence of these impersonations is patent to our readers, we need add nothing further than to say that they were fully up to the standard of their pristine excellence. J. H. Stoddart gave a broadly humorous portraiture of Sunbury Koob; E. F. Ringgold was manly, frank and noble as Mathew Leigh, and acted with gentlemanly ease; Charles Rockwell as Col. Cavendish May, seemed thoroughly to understand the requirements of that character, and artfully concealed his villainous designs under a calm and placid exterior; little Jenny Timoney as Sir Arthur May spoke her lines distinctly and intelligently. Miss Effie Germon acted Rose Leigh effectively, imbuing it with much of the natural vivacity of her own character. Mme. Ponisi, who made her first appearance at this theatre, acted Tabitha Stork most artistically. The domineering, wayward spirit of the old household servant, who had nursed the present head of the family, was admirably portrayed, while her sudden change of manner at the flattering remarks of Elliot Grey bore the impress of the true artist. Her make up was excellent. Miss Isadore Cameron, another first appearance, acted Lady Adela Grey fairly. Miss Blaisdell as Primrose, Miss Benton as Mother Mix, Mr. W. Quigley as Romany Rob, E. M. Holland as Corporal Daw, J. Peck as Dooksey, and Mr. Danvers as Robert, deserve creditable mention for their performance of the minor characters. "Rosedale" is announced for continued representation.

HY. CUNNINGHAM, dramatic agent, 638 Broadway, advertises that the following people can be engaged through him:—Billy Pastor, clown and vocalist, and Hy. C. Melville, character vocalist. He has, also, for sale, half interest in an entertainment, and is authorized to negotiate for the production of Chas. H. Newton's drama, "Cast Upon the World."

AT THE UNION SQUARE THEATRE, Harrigan and Hart, in their clever performance of "Little Fraud," and the reappearance of Miss Bonfanti, are the novelties announced for the present week.

P. T. BARNUM'S MUSEUM, menagerie, hippodrome, circus and international zoological garden, to designate the exhibition as officially announced, commenced a winter season at the rink, on Third avenue, at Sixty third street, on Monday, Nov. 13th. Taking a view of the exterior, we find over the main entrance a large portrait of Mr. Barnum, and to the left a large painting depicting some of the scenes to be witnessed within. Entering a covered passage at the sidewalk we find ourselves in a good sized room, in the left hand portion of which are situated the ticket offices; proceeding a short distance we encounter the check taker, and, on presenting him the necessary voucher, we are ushered into an apartment a little larger than the one last referred to. Here, on the left, is a machine for cutting "feed," the motive power of which is a good-sized dog. Passing on and opening the large doors we find ourselves in the rink proper. We will now turn to the left and make the entire circuit of the building, describing what is there in the order that the objects meet the eye. Two sections of one of the large trees of California, one some three inches thick, showing the diameter and circumference thereof, and the other the bark set up in tent-like form and some fifteen feet high. Turning the corner and proceeding east we meet an automaton rope walker. Next in order are five cages of automata. In the first the sleeping beauty and a large peacock, in the second, seven figures of little girls who perform upon musical bells; in the third, a figure of a dying Zouave with a Sister of Mercy at his side; in the fourth, a drummer, and two separate groups of singing birds; in the fifth, a goat and kid, some apes, who imitate human figures in a scene called "Jealousy," and a scene representing buildings and water, with various moving figures. The next cage contains a Cardiff giant, a Chinese joss, walrus tusks and various spears fashioned from the bones of animals. Against the side of the building, on our left, is a mitraleuse, some mastadon bones and a case containing ancient arms. In the next cage we find six life size wax figures of the late Charles Dickens, Bismarck, the Emperor William, Napoleon III and Von Moltke, then Japanese and Chinese curiosities, a collection of stuffed birds of rare and beautiful plumage, curiosities from the Arctic regions, which brings us to the collection of animals. Here we find a zebra and two baby lions, white polar bear, rhinoceros, Peruvian Llama, anacondas, boa constrictor, Egyptian mummy and a section of bark of one of the large California trees, four performing lions, two of each sex, two large elephants, a baby elephant, a large number of camels, an African lion and lioness, Australian kangaroo, a giant cassowary, African zebra, nylghau, African eland, South American tapir, small Arctic seal, African porcupine, large ape, "happy family," consisting of monkeys, dogs, squirrels, hens, and other animals; pink-eyed Albino deer, a Rocky Mountain sheep, a cynocephalus, gold spotted leopard, black leopard, from Java; Abyssinian wart hog, Bengal tiger, sacred Burmese bull, South African "gems bok oryx gazella," kangaroo, spotted hyenas, Brazilian tiger, California puma, spotted leopards, South African lion and lioness, collection of living tropical birds, tanks containing sea lions, among them one that barks like a dog. The space allotted for the promenade, over which we have just passed, is some twenty feet wide. Standing at our starting point and taking a coup d'œil of the interior, we see before us a wide passage way, reached by descending a few steps, which leads us to the hippodrome; on the right are the reserved seats, occupying one half of a circle, and supplied with chairs and settees, the opposite half being supplied with the kind of seats used during the lecturing season. The entire space, enclosed by the line of cages above described, is used for circus purposes. The band is stationed directly opposite the main entrance in a compartment elevated some thirty feet from the earth; at the rear of this is a large tent, used for dressing rooms for the performers, and at the rear of that on either side are accommodations for the horses used in the ring and their grooms. Equestrian performances are given daily; Dan Castello has charge of that department, and appears in person at each entertainment. The corps of riders, acrobats, gymnasts and clowns are excellent. At the conclusion of the equestrian performances as you pass toward the main exit the attention is arrested by a blast from a trumpet, and looking in that direction, you perceive it was given by a large automaton figure placed at a high altitude. Ere the sounds of the trumpet have died away, an automaton figure placed contiguous to the trumpeter commences a clever performance upon the horizontal bar. In the front part of the building on either side of the entrance are two large rooms, one of which is occupied by a troupe of glass blowers, who display a large number of samples of their skill, and the other is devoted to the exhibition of the living curiosities, among which are a giant, a fat woman, an Albino, the Aztec children, Admiral Dot, a dwarf, a little girl whose body is covered with a heavy growth of hair, and a lady born without arms, but who performs with her feet a number of difficult things usually only accomplished by the former. In the southwest corner of the building is a shooting gallery, and there are refreshment stands in several parts of the building. The best of order is preserved and the patronage thus far extended has been good.

THE GLOBE THEATRE WAS re-opened on Monday evening, Nov. 13th, with a dramatic company, who acted in Charles Foster's drama entitled "Bertha," which was creditably placed upon the stage. The attendance was not, however, large during the week. W. H. Whalley gave a bold, vigorous and natural impersonation of Jack Ryerson. Jasper Carter was exceedingly well acted by Joseph P. Delmar, who was quiet and artistic, and may be pronounced a good actor. We believe he made his metropolitan debut on the opening night. Conrad Bascomb was carefully acted by G. Partello. W. M. Foster appeared to excellent advantage as the mendicant Dick Rivers, the portraiture being characteristic and natural. Mrs. E. T. Stetson did not do full justice to her abilities by her impersonation of Lizzie Graham. Miss Lottie Howland displayed much vivacity as Hester Smith, and made herself a favorite with the audience. Mrs. R. G. France acted Miss Pinch excellently well, her make up deserving great praise. Of the remainder of the company we prefer not to speak at present, as some of them possibly, from force of circumstances, were cast for roles they should not have undertaken. This evening an entire change in the programme of entertainment will be made. "Sappho, the Child of Comedy," which is the nom de theatre that has been assumed by a little miss of some twelve summers, will commence a brief engagement, acting the leading role in William Brough's fairy extravaganza of "Prince Amabel; or, The Fairy Roses," during which the operetta of "The Waterman" will be introduced, with "Sappho" as Tom Tug.

A WEEK WITH CHARLES FOSTER would not be an inapt title, in show bill parlance, to characterize the entertainments at the Bowery Theatre during the past week. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings his drama, entitled "Bertha," was acted, giving place on Thursday evening to another drama from his pen, entitled the "Old Straw Man," preceded by "Robert Macaire;" on Friday and Saturday evenings his drama entitled "New York Burglars; or, Marriage by Moonlight" was acted, in conjunction with the "Two Highwaymen" on Friday evening and "Jack Sheppard" on Saturday evening. As we have commented upon Mr. Foster's pieces upon their first production we need only add that they attracted a good average attendance during the week. For this evening a new drama, from the pen of Mr. Lewis F. Stoller, entitled "Searching the Depths; or, The New York Detective," is announced to receive its first representation.

AT THE ST. JAMES THEATRE, Levey's operetta, entitled "Fanchette," and Offenbach's "La Rose de Saint Fleur," were charmingly performed by Miss Susan Galton and her company, assisted by Mr. John Clark, of the Brooklyn Theatre, during the entire week. Mr. E. D. Davies also gave his wonderful ventriloquial performances. Miss Galton received, on Wednesday evening, a farewell benefit, and a like compliment was extended Mr. Davies on Friday evening. These artists closed their engagements on Nov. 18th, Mr. Davies going to the Howard Athenæum, Boston, Mass., for two weeks, commencing Nov. 20th. This evening, Miss Annie Lonsdale, who has been absent from the stage for some years, will make her rentrée, supported by a dramatic company complete in numbers.

CHARLES F. JACKSON, for some time connected with a dramatic company under the management of James M. Ward, of Philadelphia, died in this city at St. Luke's Hospital, at the corner of Fifty-fourth street and Fifth avenue, Nov. 14th. Some months since Mr. Jackson received information that quite a sum of money had been left him in England by a relative. Proceeding thither he received the amount, returned to this country, and commenced leading a rather fast life. He had recently rented apartments in Fourteenth street, and some few days since, in company with a male companion, attempted to introduce some alleged improper characters to his apartments; being remonstrated with by the landlady, he, being under the influence of liquor, abused her, when his companion seized a poker and struck Jackson over the head. Some two or three days after this he fell insensible, and was taken to the above hospital on Oct. 31st, where it was found that his skull was fractured and that the bone pressed upon the brain, from the effects of which he died in a delirious state on the day above mentioned. Efforts have been made to ascertain who the party was that struck the blow, but up to the present time without success.

THE MEMBERS of the American Dramatic Fund Association are notified, through a card in another column, to attend a special general meeting of the association on Dec. 18th.

THE TWELFTH WEEK of Mr. Augustin Daly's successful drama entitled "Divorce" will be commenced at the Fifth Avenue Theatre this evening. We need only add that the attendance continues undiminished.

THE THIRTY FOURTH STREET THEATRE is the name of a new variety theatre which is announced to be opened on Nov. 27th, under the management of W. W. Smith, assisted by Mr. Ella Mills, as stage manager. It is situated in Thirty Fourth street a little east of Third avenue. Among the performers already engaged are Fred. Maynard, comic, and Harry Thorne, pantomimist. It will be seen by an advertisement in another column that the company engaged are requested to assemble on the stage for rehearsal, Nov. 23d.

COL. T. A. BROWN, dramatic agent, 718 and 720 Broadway, inserts, in another column, an account of his doings in Europe, and the following artists can be engaged through his agency:—Ada Harland, star actress; John C. Campbell, character actor; Mons. Robere, Russian gymnast; Le Clair Bros., gymnasts, and Robt. E. Stevens, as business manager, after Dec. 1st.

DELEHANTY AND HENGLER, double song and dance performers, were the only new appearances at the Theatre Comique during the week. They performed in an original sketch called "Larks in the Park," which consisted of a number of songs and dances performed in male and female attire alternately. Their performances were good and won much approbation from the audience. Later in the evening they performed a double song attired as Hottentots, which was very comical. A new sketch, entitled "Sawdust," was the next attraction, in point of novelty. It is a representation of a series of trials at the Tombs Police Court. A sketch, entitled "Work; or, The Irish Policeman," also new, closed the programme. "LE JEUNE" BURT, one of the most graceful and daring hurdle riders in America, commenced an engagement at the New York Circus, Nov. 13th, and continued during the week. Mounted upon a steed divested of all trappings, which he urges to its greatest speed, he assumes graceful poses, anon jumping to the earth and quickly regaining his former position without checking the speed of his charger, in the meantime vaulting over hurdles at equi-distant points in the circle. His performances were received with much applause. Charles Fish closed his engagement on Nov. 11th. Miss Lucy Watson continued her dashing equestrian feats, as did Charles F. Read his somersault riding, both giving much satisfaction. The clever Joe brothers charmed the audience with their performances upon "Musical Rocks" and in the spinning. The muscular contortions of Signor Ferranti; the double trapeze and horizontal bar performances of the Beasley Brothers; the refined and witty remarks of D. A. Seal, the clown, the vaulting by the corps of acrobats, and the assumed stupidity of the clown E. E. Almonta were all deserving of commendation. An extra matinee performance was given this day, Nov. 20th, for the benefit of the Chicago sufferers. There is no change announced for the present week. Mr. Lent assures us that the gross receipts from the matinee benefit for the Chicago sufferers will be sent by him to a personal friend in Chicago, who will see the money distributed among professional people only.

DON PEDRO DORRESO, guitar player, was married, Nov. 16th, at the church of the Holy Saviour, in this city, to Miss Lolo Regual, of New York.

Dramatic.

To Managers, Agents, Doorkeepers and Others.

Every regularly authorized correspondent of THE NEW YORK CLIPPER is supplied with the necessary credentials, in the shape of a card, with an engraving of the CLIPPER Building on one side, and on the other the name of the correspondent, city, etc., signed by the proprietor of the paper, with the stamp of the office, and date of Sept. 1st, 1871, affixed thereto, each card running for six months, when new ones will be issued on the return of the old, but one representative being recognized in each place. We particularly request that managers of entertainments will decline extending favors to any person representing himself as correspondent of this paper who cannot produce the card referred to. By acceding to this request, managers will not be imposed on by irresponsible parties. Cards are only issued to correspondents of the amusement department of this paper. Parties applying for the position of correspondent are specifully requested to consider silence a negative.

ON THE EVENING of the 11th inst., the last of the engagement of Miss Pauline Cushman at the New Bowery Theatre, Philadelphia, a scene, not down on the bills, ensued by that lady making her appearance on the stage and refusing to act that evening. She made a short speech to the very small audience in attendance and retired. Mr. J. T. Fannin, the stage manager, apologized for her conduct, stating he was unable to assign any cause for it, and the dramatic portion of the entertainment was concluded by the substitution of another piece for that in which Miss Pauline Cushman was announced to appear. Mr. J. Maguire was to have opened at this house on the 13th inst., in the drama of "Over the Falls," but he failed to put in an appearance, and this rather dilapidated temple of the drama remained closed during the past week.

"ELVIE; OR, THE CHERRY TREE INN" was produced in Pittsburgh, Pa., for the first time, at the Pittsburgh Opera House on the 13th inst., with Charles Wheatleigh as Sadlove. It has been running all the week to slim audiences. It has been produced regardless of cost. In fact, the scenery in detail is the finest and most elaborate seen in this city for years. The Parepa-Rosa Opera Troupe open on the 20th for one week.....J. K. Emmett as Fritz is drawing every evening at the Fifth Avenue Opera House. Mr. Emmett's acting is marked with a smoothness and softness it lacked heretofore. Lillie Edwards as Little Fritz deserves and receives commendation. Mr. Emmett continues next week, when "Carl, the Fiddler," will be produced.....The "Drummer Boy of Shiloh" has been peculiarly successful at the Academy of Music, and holds the boards until the 18th inst. The receipts will be appropriated to the benefit of the Soldiers and Widows and Orphans' Fund. So reported our correspondent, writing on Nov. 17th.

FRANK MAYO commenced a week's engagement at the Griswold Opera House, Troy, N. Y., on the 13th inst. Our correspondent, writing on the 17th, says:—"He opened in 'Hamlet' supported by C. S. Coon as Polonius, M. Wood as Horatio, J. F. Crossen as the King, E. T. Mack as Laertes, Mr. F. C. Maynard as the ghost, and Mrs. Crolius as Ophelia. Mr. Mayo has somewhat toned down his acting since he was last here, and depends more for his effects upon subtlety of expression and clear and plain reading of the text. His portraiture of the melancholy Dane was excellent, and held the audience by an unbroken spell throughout the play. It was complimented by a call before the curtain. The ghost, by Mr. Maynard, was finely portrayed, while Mr. Coon personated Polonius remarkably well. Mr. M. Wood enacted the role of Horatio very creditably, although some parts of it might have been improved. Ophelia, by Miss Mina Crolius, was an excellent impersonation. The rest of the characters were in good hands, and the piece went off very smoothly. On the 14th 'Richelieu' was presented with powerful cast. Mayo, as the Cardinal, left nothing to be desired, either in his make-up, dress, manner or conception of the part. He was very well supported in this piece by the stock company; in fact Mr. Mayo's carefulness seemed to have spread itself over the whole company, and we have never seen 'Hamlet' or 'Richelieu' so well acted in this city as on these occasions. The arrangements of the scenery and the stage appointments were also very creditable. On the 15th and 16th he was acted 'Belphegor,' in which Miss Lizzie Gale's conception and acting of the role of Madeline was excellent. Mr. J. L. Delaney, a new comedian, made his first appearance, and enacted the character of Fanfaronade, in which he was very successful. On Friday evening Mr. Mayo is announced to act in 'Macbeth,' supported by Mrs. Waller, as Lady Macbeth. 'Belphegor' is announced for the matinee on Saturday, and in the evening Mr. Mayo closes his engagement with 'Richard III.' The attendance during the week has been very good, despite the unpropitious state of the weather, and his engagement, both pecuniarily and artistically considered, was a great success. Daniel E. Bandmann is the next attraction, opening on the 20th, for one week."

THE "BLACK CROOK" at Evansville, Ind., says our correspondent, writing on the 17th inst., did not have as good a house on the 17th as on the 16th inst., and the matinee was a failure, not enough people being there to warrant the doors to be opened. On the 16 h the house was but comfortably filled, on the occasion of a benefit to R. Fitzgerald, the manager of the company. They were to leave for Vincennes and Terre Haute on the evening of gagement, opening in 'East Lynne,' to be followed on Tuesday with 'Leah;' Wednesday, 'Masks and Faces;' Thursday, 'Oliver Twist;' Friday and Saturday continue, 'East Lynne;' Saturday night, 'Child Stealer.'"

AT THE ARCH STREET THEATRE, Philadelphia, Stuart Robson concluded a moderately successful one week's engagement on the evening of the 18th inst. During the week he appeared in "Everybody's Friend," "Married Life," "The Poor Gentleman," "Camille," "Mazeppa" and other specialties, in which it is needless, perhaps, to say that he was irresistibly comic, and left out no possible chance to enhance the effect of his impersonations, which, although supported by an excellent stock company, was not rewarded with the attendance expected. On the 20th inst. Mr. J. J. McCloskey's drama of "Pomp; or, Way Down South," will be produced, with new scenery, including a panorama of the Mississippi, by Charles Hawthorne. Mr. J. C. Campbell has been specially engaged to sustain the character of Pomp in the new drama.

MANAGERS desiring to produce a new sensational drama, "The Revolt of the Commune; or, Paris in 1871," are requested to address Miss Kate Rance, who is at present playing at the Theatre Royal, Montreal, Canada.

JIM HAYS has had a drama, "Hans, the Dutch Emigrant," written expressly for him, and he advertises that he is prepared to accept short star engagements.

THEATRICAL MATTERS IN BOSTON, up to Nov. 17th, is furnished as appended by our correspondent:—"At Wood's Theatre Mrs. Lander has succeeded Edwin Forrest this week; at Mosart Hall the Majiltons are playing, and at Pike's the Wallack Combination are in their second week. Business at all three places has been slow, the first two nights having been very wet and disagreeable. At Wood's Mrs. Lander appeared as Elizabeth on Monday and Tuesday, supported by J. H. Taylor as Essex, and the regular company in the balance of the cast. Whiting was cast as Bacon, Barton as King James, Church as Burleigh, Wood as Drake, Grierson as Howard, Johnson as Mendoza, and Mrs. Salisbury, Mary Davenport and Imogene Kent in the female roles. Mrs. Lander's Elizabeth was very impressively rendered, and Mr. Taylor's Essex was a fine, manly impersonation. The cast generally was a very excellent one, and the piece was well put on the stage and richly costumed. 'Marie Antoinette' was the attraction for Wednesday and Thursday, with a very strong cast, embracing, besides those named above, Macauley as Lafayette, Charlotte Crampton as Princess Lambelle, Fanny Prestige as Therese, and John Marble as Sauce. For her benefit, tonight (Friday), Mrs. Lander will appear as Peg Woffington, in 'Masks and Faces;' Mr. Taylor playing Triplet. The 'Stranger' is to be the attraction for to-morrow's matinee, and 'Marie Antoinette' will be given in the evening. Charles Mathews commences an engagement of six nights on Monday.....At Mozart Hall the Majiltons have appeared in their grotesque acts and dances to the delight of those who have seen them. The attractions with them consist of 'Les Trois Diables;' J. H. Millburn, character singer; Harry Brown, English comique; Jester, the 'Talking Hand' performer; Butler and Vance, pantomimists; Mlle Caroline, pantomimist; the Walhalla Troupe, and Sallie Warner, comedienne. So, at least, say their bills. Last night the box receipts were attached by Davis & Co., theatrical agents, on a claim for fees for engaging ballet performers. The case will be heard next week. The proprietors of the hall also have a claim upon which they have sued out an attachment, and it is doubtful whether the party will be able to perform this evening. Their season was to extend into next week, three nights.....At Pike's, the latest production of H. J. Byron's 'Daisy Farm,' was given on Monday and Tuesday, and would probably have drawn largely but for the horrible weather. It is a pleasant four act domestic and sensational drama, constructed with considerable skill, containing good, sprightly dialogue, and some clear cut characters, and may fairly be put down as a success. It was nicely put upon the stage, some of the scenes being new and pretty. Mr. Wallack appeared to good advantage in the leading rote of Andrew Armstrong, giving it with considerable depth of feeling. Mr. Wheelock's Craven was an excellent, correct piece of acting. The Cribbage of Mrs. Bernard was a sprightly piece of dialect acting, one of the best things she has ever done. Mrs. Virginia Germon deserves commendation for her enactment of Bridget Armstrong. Messrs. Conner and Curler, and indeed, the company generally, rendered their characters in a manner to leave nothing desired. The 'Iron Mask' was repeated Wednesday to a fair house, and 'Macbeth' was given on Thursday, with Mrs. Virginia Germon as Lady Macbeth, Mrs. Bernard as Hecate, and Pierre Bernard as the first singing witch. The musical part was finely rendered, but the play on the whole was hardly a success. To-night (Friday) a complimentary benefit has been tendered to Manager John T. Ford, and the bill selected is 'As You Like It,' with Mrs. Bernard as Rosalind, Mr. Wheelock as Orlando, and Mr. Wallack as Jacques. 'Daisy Farm' is to be given for the matinee to-morrow, and 'Oliver Twist' in the evening. The combination will remain one more week, and are to be succeeded by the Parepa-Rosa troupe, commencing the 27th.....Manager H. J. Sargent, of the National, is in the city, and will open the National on Monday, 27th, with the Heiman Opera Company, and the artists mentioned last week, besides, probably, several others.....The new Dayton Music Hall, said to be a very elegant one, is to be inaugurated next (this) week by the Parepa-Rosa troupe. It is built on the site of the old Turner Opera House."

THINGS THEATRICAL in San Francisco are thus chronicled by our regular, writing on Nov. 11th:—"The California Theatre was full to overflowing upon the production of the old Gotham sketch of 'Mose' on Monday, the 6th. New scenes for the piece, representing St. Paul's and the Astor House from Park Row, the City Hall and the Brooklyn Heights, were painted by Porter. These, in their resemblance to the places depicted, brought out several rounds of applause. It would be useless to disguise, however, that a disappointment was felt over the piece, the point of which has been lost in the whirligig of time. But the clamor was so loud for its production that Chanfrau's objections, sustained as they were by experience, were rigidly ignored, and his appearance in the title character—now utterly lacking the talents—inspired the reflection that Mose was nothing but a folly of a gilded dramatic youth, and evidently is so regarded by Chanfrau himself. With the 'Debutante' and 'Rough Diamond' 'Mose' remained the attraction up to the 9th. 'The Octoroon,' which followed for two representations, with a few exceptions was not played up to the high standard customary at this theatre. Those exceptions were Williamson Scudder—on the whole the best performance of that character we have had for some time; Mestayer's Jacob McCloskey, Chanfrau's Pete, Minnie Walton's Paul, and May Howard's Zoe. The conclusion of Chanfrau's engagement will be reached this evening with Chanfrau in 'Toodles' and 'Mose,' and Williamson in 'Irish Emigrant.' G. D. Byron in 'Across the Continent' in more, Nov. 13th.....At the Metropolitan Theatre, Brougham's sensational drama, 'Lottery of Life,' has been the attraction during the week. It was well placed on the stage and, in parts, was effectively performed. The concert room scene introduced considerable of the song and dance business, much to the delight of the gallery, where indeed for the most part the drama is addressed. Henry, who was played with ability by J. H. Hardie, whose disposition to study and please is a feature which, in a young actor, is not to be held in light estimation. Robt. McWade made an active cockney boxer of Robt. Mauley, satisfying his audience better than in any character he has assumed, from Rip Van Winkle down. J. H. Vinson, as the inimitable Sir William Don Bourne, presented an amusing, eccentric sketch; Geo. Waldron, as Solomon, as usual, was a lucid and mild dramatic, and Mr. Frank Rea coined a real bit of character out of Biddy Murphy, the itinerant apple-woman. The remaining characters were assumed as follows:—Coal Oil Tommy, Chas. Vivian; Rupert Mordaunt, Harry Colton; Dodgers, John Woodward; Dennis, Geo. Hinckley; Miss Tartar, Fanny Young; Emily Summers, Mrs. Waldron; Mary Susie Soule; Polly O'Halloran, Maggie Moore. Jas. Ward in 'Through by Daylight,' Monday, Nov. 18th."

JOHN MCCULLOUGH opened at Piper's Opera House, Virginia City, on the 7th, to a tremendous house in "Hamlet." James Carden appeared as the Ghost, Owen Marlowe as Horatio, Edmund Leathes as Laertes, Pierpont Thayer as the King, Wm. Barry as the Gravedigger, and Miss Nichelle as Ophelia. "Othello," on the 9th, McCullough created great enthusiasm as the Cardinal Duke, and in "Othello," on the 9th, appeared as Mine Ancient to the Moor of James Carden. The engagement thus far has been a distinguished success.

EVERY SEAT IN THE OPERA HOUSE at Titusville, Pa., writes our correspondent on Nov. 17th, "was occupied Nov. 16th, when Miss Lydia Thompson and troupe appeared in the burlesque of 'Blue Beard,' which was finely performed. The Corporal, afterwards the Heathen Chinee, of Mr. Edouin was a happy hit. On Tuesday evening they appeared in the burlesque of 'Lurline,' instead of 'Sinbad, the Sailor,' as previously announced. On Wednesday evening a complimentary benefit was tendered to Miss Thompson, by request of many citizens, when they presented the burlesque of 'Davy in Pantomime,' which was rendered in an excellent manner. After the farce Miss Thompson was called before the curtain and made a neat speech. As she was about leaving the stage she encountered our worthy mayor, Mr. Bates, who, in a few appropriate remarks, presented Miss T., in behalf of her many admirers, with a silver derrick and oil barrel. She returned her thanks for the gift and retired. The burlesque of 'Sinbad, the Sailor,' closed the entertainment."

AT NEW HAVEN, CONN., our correspondent, writing on Nov. 18th, says:—"The 'Lancashire Lass' was played at the Music Hall on Nov. 13th, with Mrs. J. J. Prior as the star. The play was acceptably rendered, but failed to excite any enthusiasm. Sir. Gar.....Swaine Buckley appeared in it on the track, 'Sir Geoffrey,' on the 14th. His support was very fair, Mr. Mark Price as Sidney Chandos and L. W. Harris as Sampson Slick being particularly good.....Mrs. McCready as Shylock is announced to appear to-night."

ROSE AND HARRY WATKINS opened at Virginia Hall, Richmond, Va., Nov. 13th, in the drama of "Kathleen Mavourneen," in which Mr. Watkins appeared as Terence O'Moore, and Mrs. Watkins as Kathleen. Our correspondent, writing on Nov. 16th, says:—"Mr. and Mrs. Watkins played well their parts, but the company that supports them, with a few exceptions, was not quite so successful. On the 14th and 15th 'Trodden Down' was produced; the 16th, the 'Hidden Hand,' and on the 17th, for the benefit of Mrs. Watkins, 'A Warrior's Wife.' 'Divorced; or, It Takes Two to Quarrel,' and 'Nilson's Come.' A pleasing novelty of the performance was Prof. Kenney and dat guiter on the tumbleronicon, or musical glasses. Mr. and Mrs. Watkins have been playing to the most fashionable audiences of the season. The hall is a pretty and pleasant little place. The stage will soon be enlarged and every convenience perfected. 'The Hidden Hand' is announced for the matinee Saturday, and the night Mr. and Mrs. Watkins close their engagement with the domestic drama of 'Molly Bawn,' and a comedy called 'Adventures of a Love Letter.'....."

At the Richmond Theatre, Neil Warner having failed to reach this city on the 15th inst. in time for the evening's performance, 'Pauchon' was substituted, with Mr. and Mrs. Noyes in the leading parts. The play was well rendered by the stock company. On Tuesday evening Warner, supported by Miss Grace Rawlinson, appeared in 'Othello,' which, so far as the best efforts of the actors could secure that object, was a complete success. Neil Warner played his part acceptably and with much spirit. The Desdemona of Miss Rawlinson was all that could be desired. She is pretty but lacks experience. The Iago of Mr. Noyes was well rendered—he is fast winning the good graces of the Richmond public—and the Emelia of Mrs. Noyes was acted with care and judgment; Mr. Brown as Cassio was creditable, and Mr. Davenport acquitted himself well as Roderigo. Wednesday, 'Macbeth' was produced; Thursday, 'A New Way to Pay Old Debts;' Friday, 'Richelieu' and 'Delicate Ground' are announced. On Saturday Mr. Warner and Miss Rawlinson will close their engagement, appearing in 'Richard III' on horseback."

THE WORRELL SISTERS commence a brief season at Savannah, Ga., Nov. 20th.

"IN MEMORIAM."—The departure from this world of the well known and esteemed actor, Mr. Lyman P. Roys, is worthy of more than a passing notice. He was an actor of no mean repute, and while playing engagements under the management of William Fleming, in Boston, John Brougham, in New York, and Burton, in Philadelphia, Baltimore and other cities, was greatly admired and respected. In Boston he was considered one of the greatest favorites of the time, and many old theatre-goers to-day, no doubt, remember his great impersonation of Buridan, in "La Tour De Nelse." He was at one time a member of the stock at Forbes' Theatre, Providence, and at the time of his death, at Lewiston, Me., was a member of Myers and Huntley's Dramatic Company. Mr. R. was brought up in the Methodist persuasion, and although not a strict follower of the church, was a christian at heart, and had great faith in prayer. All who knew him loved him; ever ready to assist his brother and sister professionals, he won the kindest wishes of those with whom he came in contact. Although in feeble health at the commencement of the season, it was not expected he would drop off so soon, but his time had come, and when the curtain fell on the last act of his life he was among strangers, who, by the way, deserve the thanks of the entire profession for the respect shown to all that remained of the poor player.

Sleep well, oh kind and thankful one, for now your work is o'er,
The deeds of kindness you have done are known from shore to shore;
And tho' we miss the friendly grasp of that once ready hand,
We'll think of thee, dear brother, resting in a stranger land;
The happy days of long ago we never can forget,
For joys and scenes that long have pass'd, cling to our mem'ry yet;
And tho' the angels bade you come to them above the sky,
It grieves us all to think, kind one, that you so soon should die.
Let daisies bend their little heads, let willow branches wave,
And let the sweetest roses bloom in plenty o'er your grave;
Let robins sing their little notes to thee at dawn of day,
And let the whippoorwill at eve re-echo out a lay;
Let scented clover blossoms dot the ever sacred ground,
And let the bee and butterfly repose upon the mound;
Let gentle summer breezes waft a perfume through the air,
And may all things in Nature ever seem divinely there.

A DEAR FRIEND.

A NEW DRAMA entitled "Euchre," by Hy. Lindley, will shortly be produced.

STOCK ARTISTS and first class stars and combinations are requested to address the manager of the Adelphi Opera House, Nashville, Tenn., as per advertisement.

T. BROOK, an amateur, who advertises, wants an opportunity to study for the stage.

WM. CALDER can hear of his parents by addressing as per advertisement.

JOSEPH JEFFERSON acted at the Opera House, Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 13th, 14th and 15th in "Rip Van Winkle," and notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, people were turned away nightly. He was supported by the stock company in a very fine manner.....Miss Jean Hosmer commenced a short engagement of three nights on the 16th inst., in "Foul Play;" on the 17th was acted "Man and Wife." The house was rather light, but the performance good. On the 18th, the "Woman in White" was presented in the evening for the benefit of Miss Hosmer, and at the matinee "Foul Play" was repeated. Mrs. F. S. Chanfrau makes her first appearance on Monday evening, 20th, in "Dora."

THE NEW VARIETIES THEATRE, New Orleans, La., is rapidly approaching completion, and it is anticipated that it will be ready for opening early in December. It is situated on Canal street in the block bounded by Custom House, Dauphine and Burgundy streets, and has a frontage of eighty feet, a depth of one hundred and sixty feet, and a height of sixty-nine feet. The parquet and dress circle contain eight hundred seats, and the first gallery will seat four hundred and fifty. There are twelve boxes and a second gallery. The following is a list of the officers and company:—Lawrence Barrett, director; Loraine Rogers, business manager; J. H. Selwyn, stage manager. The Misses M. E. Gordon, Lizzie Price, Edith Chanfrau, Ione Burke, Mary Carr, Emma Cline, Georgina Reignolds, Emma Marble, Rose Telbin, Maddern, Rose Wood, Murdock, Messrs George Clarke, Dominick Murray, Stuart Robson, George Ryer, Harold Forsberg, T. J. Hind, John Howson, A. Pitou, George Holland, Jr., F. Fisher, Frank Murdock, T. Goodsen, C. H. Frye, G. Herbert, R. J. Brown and H. Marston.

JOHN TEMPLETON'S dramatic company is announced to commence a brief season at St. Andrew's Hall, Savannah, Ga., which is being fitted up for dramatic purposes, on Nov. 20th.

HERNDON'S OPERA HOUSE COMPANY is billed for six nights in the new opera house at Glen's Falls, N. Y., commencing Nov. 27th.

LANNIER'S Dramatic Company performed at Manchester, N. H., Nov. 17th and 18th. J. E. Nugent has become the leading man, vice R. J. Meldrum.

AT THE OPERA HOUSE, Utica, N. Y., the Forresters produced "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" on Nov. 13th, and the "Streets of New York" on the 14th and 15th. On the 16th inst. the first lecture of the Mechanics' Association course was delivered by Mr. Conover, subject, "City About Brown," on which occasion the Forresters played at Waterville, and returning on the 17th, produced "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl."

AMUSEMENTS IN ALBANY, N. Y., are thus reported by our correspondent, writing on Nov. 18th:—"Owing to the inclement state of the weather, the attendance at the theatres has been very light. Mr. Charles Mathews has appeared at the Trimble Opera House in several of his best characters. The members of the company most notable for their support of Mr. Mathews are Messrs Forsberg, Pierce and Waverly, the Misses Safford and Ellis and Mrs. Perry. Joseph Jefferson, on Monday evening, 20th, commences a week's engagement, in 'Rip Van Winkle'.....Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Albaugh have been playing to crowded audiences at the Capitol Theatre. 'Eustache Baudin' was given on the 13th and 14th, 'Henry Dunbar' on the 15th, 'Macbeth' on the 16th, with Mr. Albaugh in the title role, Mrs. Albaugh as Lady Macbeth, Walter Keeble as Macduff, and Frank Foster as Malcolm. The 'Ticket-of-Leave Man,' for the benefit of Mr. and Mrs. Albaugh, on the 17th. The same bill was repeated for the matinee. Mrs. Albaugh having left for New York. Miss Linda Rhona being cast for May Edwards, managed to stumble through the lines, speaking so low as to be almost inaudible beyond the footlights. The Hawkshaw of Mr. Foster and the Melter Moss of Wm. Scallan were the best performed parts in the play. Mr. Albaugh closed his engagement this evening with the 'Sailor of France' and 'Black Eyed Susan.'—On the 20th Miss Rose Evans commences an engagement in 'Ingomar.'.....The Troester Brothers, Philip and Henry, acrobats, have sued Manager Denier to recover the amount of the salary for services rendered during the run of 'Humpty Dumpty.' The amount claimed by the Troesters is two hundred dollars. Mr. Denier claims they were amateurs, anxious for an opening, and volunteered their services.

Variety Hall.

To Managers, Doorkeepers and Others.

Every regularly authorized correspondent of the NEW YORK CLIPPER is supplied with the necessary credentials, in the shape of a card, with an engraving of the CLIPPER Building on one side, and on the other the name of the correspondent, city, etc., signed by the proprietor of the paper, with the stamp of the office, and date of Sept. 1st, 1871, affixed thereto, each card running for six months, when new ones will be issued on the return of the old, but one representative being recognized in each place. We particularly request that managers of entertainments will decline extending favors to any person representing himself as correspondent of this paper who cannot produce the card referred to. By acceding to this request, managers will not be imposed on by irresponsible parties. Cards are only issued to correspondents of the amusement department of this paper. Parties applying for the position of correspondent are respectfully requested to consider silence a negative.

THE TREMAINE BROTHERS performed at Salisbury, N. C., Nov. 16th, 17th and 18th; and are billed ahead as follows:—Fayetteville, 20th to 24th, inclusive (fair week); Wilmington, 27th to 30th, inclusive; Wilson, Dec. 1st; Petersburgh, Va., 2d and 4th; Goldsboro, N. C., 5th, and Raleigh, 6th and 7th.

ADA HARLAND'S THEATRE COMIQUE, at Austin, Texas, was opened for a season on Nov. 4th, with the following company:—The Misses Ada Franklin, Maggie Maguire, Carrie Weston, Messrs. George C. Thompson, Cal. Mandeville, Charles L. Howard and W. D. Ready. Cal. Mandeville is the stage manager, and Charles L. Howard business manager.

MCLAUGHLIN AND BOYCE, gymnast and trapeze artists, advertise for an engagement with a traveling company.

ADELINE FONTAINEBLEAU, gymnast, ceiling walker, &c., commences an engagement at the Howard Athenæum, Boston, Mass., on Nov. 27th, and managers can address her agent, Harry Cunningham, for vacant dates, &c.

A CLOG DANCER, two gymnasts, a contortionist and a violinist are wanted by Yankee Rogers, who advertises.

PROF. FRANCIS, juggler, ball balancer, &c., at present performing at the St. James Theatre, Boston, Mass., where he can be addressed, can be engaged after Dec. 2d.

A FEMALE IMPERSONATOR is wanted for Duprez & Benedict's Minstrels. Address C. H. Duprez, as per card elsewhere.

H. VICTORELLI, gymnast, of the Victorelli Family, can be addressed care of this office. Annie Victorelli will henceforth be known as Annie Braddon, which, it is stated is the lady's own name.

PERFORMERS are wanted by the proprietor of Allen's Varieties, St. Louis, Mo., who advertises.

JOHN DENIER, tight rope artist and pantomimist, and Maggie Willett, vocalist and actress, at present performing at Hooley's Opera House, Brooklyn, where they can be addressed, will be at liberty to engage after Nov. 25th.

AT THE METROPOLITAN THEATRE, Springfield, Ill., business continues good. Lulu Cullum opened on the 9th, and has proved a good card. She is possessed of an excellent voice and is fair in character acting. Harry Thompson, comedian, made his bow on the 14th. He is a clever performer, and as a Dutch comique is good. He is to be stage manager after the close of Frank Steele's engagement (Thursday, 24th), which time is set apart for his farewell benefit. Buckin and Curtis are still favorites, and Steele, in his banjo solos and songs, is good. Katie Whitland and Lena Clarke are underlined, and Sadie Rodgers is expected soon.

FEDANO was the new face at the Theatre Comique, Detroit, Mich., Nov. 13th. He is the most daring gymnast that has appeared this season, his trapeze act being wonderful, whilst his walking head downwards from the ceiling was immense. Miss Frank Christie is more of a favorite than ever in her dances. Chas. Worley and Frank Frayne are received with great applause. J. H. Carle took a benefit Nov. 17th. On the 20th the Hurdle Brothers debut. The Zitellas closed here on the 11th, and went to Cleveland. Alice Bateman and Wm. Noonan have closed and gone to the Saginaws. So wrote our correspondent on Nov. 17th.

FEMALE ARTISTS, with specialities, gymnasts and magicians, are wanted by H. W. M., who can be addressed care of this office.

AT THE VARIETIES, PEORIA, ILL.; there seems to be no abatement in the furore created by the appearance of Miss Maud De Lisle, who made her bow on the 13th inst., and who, as a serio-comic vocalist, is a first class artist. She has a good voice, appears perfectly at home in all she undertakes to do, and is a magnificent dresser. Her new song, "Tell the Boys to Choose It," is nightly received with uproarious applause. Her engagement is for two weeks, when she goes to Philadelphia. The balance of the company still maintain their well-earned reputation. E. M. Hall, banjo soloist and general performer, has been engaged, and will make his first appearance on the 20th inst. So wrote our correspondent on Nov. 17th.

THE VICTORELLIS, gymnasts; Miss Annie Braddon, serio-comic; and James Mack, clog dancer, are billed to commence at Lon Chapin's Variety Theatre, Scranton, Pa., Nov. 20th.

P. H. SEAMON, ventriloquist, &c., whose address is in another column, can be engaged.

AT THE HOWARD ATHENÆUM, Boston, Mass., the attractions for the past week have been the Matthews Family, who are very versatile, and give a very entertaining performance; the Hernandez Troupe, who appeared in the burlesque of the "Boston Peace Jubilee," Hernandez's get up and appearance as Le Gilmore being capital. Dutch Morris has also appeared in the farce "Her Dutch Legs," and proved as funny as ever. The child Americus gives a truly astonishing performance on a toy violin, and also conducts the orchestra. Kitty Neil has danced well, her specialty being a jig. Mlle. Pagani and her assistants in the ballet "Les Aventures d'une Grisette," should not be forgotten, as their part of the entertainment was well executed, and very well received by the audience. Gus Williams, Harry Bloodgood, Adah Richmond, Jas. Collins, Ashcroft, Harrigan and Hart, all appeared and were, as usual, heartily welcomed. The new people the coming week are to be Castelotti on the aerial ladder, from London; as well as Edmund D. Davies, ventriloquist; James Taylor, London comique, is also billed, in addition to Ada Alexander and Kate Riddel in aerial suspension acts. Most of the attractions of the past week have also been retained.....Business at the St. James during the past week has been fair. In the acrobatic and gymnastic lines there have been presented, M. Caron and Sons as the motley clowns; Fred. and Eva Costello on the aerial trapeze, Levantine in the one called "The Crystal Pyramid and Ascension;" the Nelsonad Bros. in "Sports of the Ancient Romans;" Wilson Bros. on a horizontal bar; Sig. Columbus in contortions; George Levantine, with the magic barrel; the Bedouin Arabs, and Jas. Ward on the cloud swing. Polly Daly has sung nightly and has improved considerably since last she was in Boston. Miller Kinane has danced a clever clog, and Ada Stewart a cito jig. Miss Annette La Point and Miss Eliza Scott have danced in specialties. Pete Lee in Ebony Rhymes and J. E. Taylor in "High Jack the Heeler," have constituted the Ethiopian department. Pete Lee also appeared as Sam, a colored servant, in the "Arrival of Nilsson." The Warren Sisters have clogged it with fine effect, and Jennie Eagle has sung as usual. The entertainment has concluded with Gosden the Giant as Cousin Joe, in the farce "Cousin Joe's Visit." The announcements for the current week are John L. Hall's burlesque company, including Barney and wife and Frank Lawlor, who will close the entertainment with "Aladdin;" Hercules Libby, cannon ball performer; Tony Harvey, Ethiopian; Burpee Gunnells and sons, acrobats; Sig. Frances, juggler; John Shay and Geo. Wilson, song and dance. Gus Williams is also announced to make his first appearance here. In this morning's papers, however, there is a card signed by him, saying that he shall not appear at the St. James Theatre, as he is engaged at the New York Union Square Theatre, also cautioning his friends against the advertisement heading the St. James bills." So wrote our correspondent, on Nov. 19th.

FROM CINCINNATI our correspondent sends the following intelligence, dated the 17th inst.:—"At the Race Street Varieties there have been two new faces since last report. P. H. Seamon, the comedian and ventriloquist, commenced on Saturday evening last and has ever since been giving his 'Peter Honta Family' (a Punch and Judy performance), representing six or eight different characters, which he personates wonderfully well. Last evening Miss Laura Delano, a young vocalist, who can and doubtless will improve, commenced an engagement. Instead of a first part, a burlesque entitled 'Father Kemp's Old Folks' is given this week, and is really an excellent piece of broad humor for a change. The part of Father Hilton Powder, the fat cook, is taken with great spirit by Seamon, and the other roles by Marsh Adams, George Wild, Lew Cavana, Viola Stanley, Belle Williams, Zelia Renard, Ettie Bowers, Nellie Halloway and Laura Delano. Besides the songs and dances in the olio, Cavana, Wild and Adams give a stirring sketch, 'Round by Rounds,' and a local piece called 'A Dutchman's First Visit to Cincinnati' winds up the agony. Finley, Foreman and Gibbons, together with those above mentioned, appearing. Ettie Bowers, during the piece, bears herself modestly in an attempt to be statuary. Ada Sprague closed here Wednesday, and has gone to Nashville. Biz has been quite good.....At the Pacific Garden business continues very brisk. The gymnastic contest on the 10th between the Gregory brothers and Davenport brothers, in what is known as the 'brother act,' was decided in favor of the latter. The judges were all professionals, namely, James Robinson, Nat. Homer, Mons. Vantini and James Williams, and three of the four decided in favor of the Gregories. The latter are in their last week at this hall. Mons. Vantini, hat spinner and trapezist, commenced here this week. He is very skilful with the hats. M'lle Gracie and Harry Clark, in their Irish Fairy Queen, are as much in demand with each other by the teeth, are encored nightly.....At Apollo Hall, Tommy Dayton and Charley McCastlin, double clog and song and dance men; M. A. Grimm, comedian; Ella Wilson, Lizzie Johnson and M'lle. Blanche are playing, and business is rather poor.....At the Olympic the only additions are J. K. O'Neil and Emma O'Neil, who have been latterly playing at the Pacific. Business is reported fair.....At Lentz's Varieties they have been no new appearances this week; but this evening two additions are to be made to the company—Neal Conway, cloggist and jiggist, and Laura Connelly, vocalist. Business continues to be good here.....John S. Gunckel, of Nashville, is in town, looking for recruits for his hall. He sent down yesterday Ada Sprague, vocalist, and Charley Adams, Dutch comedian."

OF SAN FRANCISCO variety shows we have the following: "At the Bella Union, attractions have been ballets, led by M'lle Gaugain; trapeze act, by Edwin Montague; Dutch songs, by J. R. Larkin; Lingard specialties, by Master Franklin; Garretta, on revolving globes, and Alne Le Favre as the Statue Blanche.....Leading points of interest at the Comique, Lancashire Bell Ringers, Maggie Knight's songs and dances, and 'The Trial of Brigham Smith' appear to be the most noticeable features. At the Globe Theatre, appearance of Jennie English, jig dancer; Minnie Wells—announced as the most beautifully formed woman in America—and R. Scott, clog dancer.

THE NEW ARRIVALS at the Pittsburgh Varieties Theatre are Mlle. Fontainebleau, gymnast; Kitty Rowell, vocalist, and Johnson and Powers, song and dance men. Mlle. Fontainebleau's act consists of a series of graceful trapeze act being executed with a rapidity and daring that stamps her an artiste far superior to the ordinary lady performers in this line. Kitty Rowell is a pleasing little vocalist, with a pretty face, plump form, and sings tolerably well. Johnson and Powers' songs and dances are received with applause and numerous encores nightly. Sanford's Female Minstrels continue this week. There has been an addition of one or two ladies, and Miss Flora Benton is interlocutor instead of Tom Hampton. These ladies make a decidedly fine appearance, their costumes being short white dresses, red jackets, red shoes and handsome head ornaments. They sing well and their entire performance is a success. The entertainments throughout are of a highly respectable character. The only engagement expiring this week is that of Fattie Stewart. Burke, the drill man, appears on the 20th, and perhaps Charley Vivian. So wrote our correspondent on Nov. 17th.

AT SHELBY'S COMIQUE, Buffalo, N. Y., business was good during the past week. The new songs in the minstrel scene were "Dear Little Shamrock" and "Lizzie Dies To-night," sung pathetically by the Misses Hudson and Nagle. The comic song of the "Apple of My Eye," by Harry Miller, was given with effect. The finale to the first part was an entirely new act entitled "I'm a Stranger Here Myself," given by Kennedy, Shelby, Miller and others, and provoking shouts of laughter. Mr. Holston opened the olio with his sensational changes. His burlesque, "Mouliton" is especially commendable, being natural to the life. Mr. H. showed great tact in prooucing his ballets, his "Pas de Quatre" a la Hungarian, by himself and the Misses Nagle, Wright and Robinson, being given with a charming tout ensemble and admirable pose. Harry Miller gave "Capt. Blinks of the Mule Brigade," in funny style. The ballad "You Told Me that You Loved Me," was given with pathos by Miss Clara Day. Master Billy Wheeler is an excellent performer for one of his years, his jigs and essence being given in a creditable manner. Miss Julia Robinson performed some dances with agility and grace. Dan Shelby sang "Way down in Penn-syl-va-ni-a," and succeeded in convulsing the audience with laughter. Miss Sutherland's songs concluded the second part, and the first rendered the farce of "In and Out of Place" concluded the programme. Miss Caddie Wright assuming five characters, and Kennedy and Miller filling up the cast. Miss Sutherland and Master Wheeler concluded their engagement Nov. 18th. On the 20th Ella Wesner is announced to commence her second engagement. As early as the 16th the boxes and a majority of the orchestra chairs were engaged for the entire week. Miss Agnes Sutherland will return Dec. 4th. So wrote our correspondent, Nov. 18th.

NO ADDITIONS were made to the company at the Metropolitan Hall, Washington, D. C., during the past week, but a good entertainment was offered, and the business was encouraging. Budd and Davis kept their auditors on a grin during the performance of the first part, and the effusions of Bertha Foy and Mollie Russell, in sentimental ballads, were duly appreciated. The olio was made up of a succession of comical acts and sketches, in which Whetony, Budd, Davis and the indefatigable Porter were the principal participants.....Professor Risley announces in the daily prints that he will open Wall's Opera House on the 27th with a good company. Our correspondent offers a suggestion to Professor Risley that the opera house opening with a reasonable scale of prices for admission. There are a great many people in Washington who frequently visit Sinn's in Baltimore, Fox's in Philadelphia, or Pastor's or the Comique in New York, and the highest price asked at any of the places named does not exceed seventy-five cents, and so a word to the wise I take to be sufficient."

AT THE PHILADELPHIA VARIETIES, the Prince Sadi D'Jalma, contortionist; the Wesner Sisters—Emma, Mary and Minnie—danseuses, and George B. Radcliff, comedian, made their appearance on the 13th inst. The Prince Sadi D'Jalma did an exceedingly clever contortion act, which gained for him deserved applause; he also appeared in the "Egyptian Princess of Love," displaying the utmost confidence and thorough command over the rather unwieldy looking object. The excellent singing of the Kimball Sisters, in their solos, and the musical sketch entitled "The Youth That Never Saw a Woman," deservedly made one of the most prominent and attractive features of the programme. The ballet of "The Children of Night" introduced the Wesner Sisters, Belle Graham and the ballet corps. Miss Louise Buss in a slack wire act, the Morelle Brothers in acrobatism, and George S. Knight in his Dutch specialties, were the other features of the programme, which concluded with the local sketch entitled "A Glance at Philadelphia," and the attendance of visitors was ensured until its conclusion, the dance of the "French Waiter Girls" being the last, but seemingly not the least attractive feature. Miss Belle Graham being the recipient of the most applause for her lively and graceful dancing. The first appearance of Sam Cole, Ethiopian comedian; Mlle. Desseri, premiere danseuse; Prof. Fox in his imitations; Hassell and Way, song and dance men, is announced for the 20th inst. A new sensational drama entitled "Life Among the Mormons; or, Brigham Young's Last Chance," will be produced this week.

AT DEAGLE'S VARIETIES, St. Louis, Mo., Miss Emma and Miss Edmond, Messrs, Colton, Archer, Farron and Baker continue in the graces of the public. The benefit of these latter two gentlemen, jointly, was quite a success. Miss Carry Garner in her fancy dances is very good; Miss Lucy Adams, the great attraction at present of the olio in her specialty of changes, is very neat and clever. She possesses a handsome figure, pretty face, dresses with taste and has a choice collection of songs. Business at this house has, during the past week, been something above the general average. "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl," which has been especially adapted by Geo. Thompson, has been the afterpiece during the week. The name alone, however, is about the nearest relation it has to the story, yet it has been received by all those who have witnessed it. Miss Jennie Parker, as Bertha, rendered the part quite satisfactorily, as did Mr. Thompson that of Jack Syerson, while Messrs. Lample, Chapman, Stanton and Woods were well up to the mark.....At Carroll's Mlle. Emmazetta, banjoist and vocalist, put in her first appearance this week, as did also Miss Nellie Stringfellow, balladist and soubrette. Mons. Duvernay, the man serpent, in his contortions, has attracted much attention. Sig. Bliss, the gymnast, also light and heavy balancer, is wonderful. All of these new comers are separately good, and add much to the patronage of this establishment. "Brian, the Bigamist," concludes the performances.....At Allen's Varieties, which is rapidly rising in the favor of the community, a general and varied programme is given, which is changed twice a week. Geo. Moore, Ben Gilfoil, Neil Rogers, Sam Graham and Johnny Rourke are combined at this house. Miss Kitty Henderson, cloggist, continues here. "La Militaire," by Ida Morton; songs, by Miss Fanny Keenan, and a song and dance by Miss Flora Cary, were all good, while La Belle Pauline in her lightning changes is passing. The sketch of "The Boy's Own," by Gilfoil and Rourke, met with an encore, and the "Shamus O'Brien" of Flora Bell was well received. "Livingston's Ball" terminates the nightly performances. La Belle Pauline,

THE OLD FLAG;
OR, THE SPY OF NEWBERNE.

"It presents in vivid colors the various scenes of army life, in camp, battle field and prison. The grave and gay follow each other in rapid succession, and the loftiest flights of patriotism alternate with Yankee and negro wit."—GEN. JOHN M. HARRIS, Adj. Gen., State of New Hampshire. "It fully equals, if it does not surpass, any drama of the same nature which has come under my observation. The characters are well drawn, the dialogue interesting throughout, and the dramatic situations effective in every instance."—HENRY C. HOUSTON, Asst. Adj. Gen., Dept. Maine, G. A. R. "It is, in my opinion, the best military drama now before the G. A. R."—E. P. HILL, Inspector Dept. of Maine, G. A. R. "Pronounced by all who have seen it to be the best military piece ever presented to the public."—Bangor (Me.) Daily Whig. "It is unquestionably superior in construction and literary merit to any of the numerous war dramas now racing for popular favor."—Pittsfield (Mass.) Daily Republican. "It possesses real merit, and is intensely sensational."—Rutland (Vt.) Daily Herald.
